Senate Votes To Join Court As Congress Adjourns

GI Terminal Leave, OPA Appropriations Pass; Social Security Tax Remains at 1%

By the United Press

The Seventy-ninth Congress wound up its affairs last night.

The House quit at 5:42 (E. S. T.), the Senate at 7:27 p. m. Next Congress takes office next January 3.

In its final session, the internationally minded Senate approved legislation to submit the United States to the jurisdiction of the new World Court. It also passed a $2,636,000,000 appropriation bill for GI terminal leave pay and the OPA.

Both Houses also approved legislation freezing the Social Security payroll tax at 1 per cent through 1947 and increasing the maximum Federal grant to States.

The House, meeting periodically during the day, had a quiet session. It voted to back up its Un-American Activities Committee by pressing contempt charges against Richard Morford, director of the National Council for American-Soviet Friendship.

It also sustained, on a vote of 139 to 95, President Truman's veto on legislation relinquishing all Federal claim to oil-rich tidelands. The ballot fell 17 short of the necessary two thirds necessary to overrule the veto.

Domestic Issues Reserved

Though the Senate voted to submit the United States to the jurisdiction of the new World Court, it reserved to this country the right to determine whether any issue is purely domestic and hence not within the tribunal's scope.

The decision to cede the Nation's legal authority on all matters of treaty interpretation and international law was approved on a roll call vote of 60 to 2, far exceeding the two thirds needed for passage of the resolution.

Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.), of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, sponsored the reservation amendment which left it solely up to the United States to decide whether a specific legal question is within domestic or international jurisdiction.

That rider was passed by a vote of 51 to 12 after Connally warned that failure to include such a proviso would give the World Court authority over such matters as American tariffs and immigration laws, as well as questions involving the Panama Canal.

Another restricting amendment offered by Senator Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.) was defeated, 49 to 11. It would have denied the World Court jurisdiction over in-

House Sustains Tidelands Oil Veto, 95-139

The House yesterday sustained President Truman's veto of the tidelands bill, thus killing the legislation.

The veto was 139 for overriding and veto and 95 against, but this fell 17 ballots short of the two-thirds majority required to enact a measure into law over the President's objection. The bill would have renounced in favor of the States all Federal claims to tidelands rich in oil.

The action thus gave Mr. Truman a victory in a last-minute flare-up of discord with the Seventy-ninth Congress.

Two Other Vetoes Sustained

Previously, the House has sustained his vetoes on the Case labor disputes bill and the first OPA continuation measure. In each case a majority, but no ttwo thirds, voted t ooverride.

On the Tidelands test, those voting to override were 36 Democrats and 103 Republicans; 86 Democrats, 7 Republicans and 2 minor party members, voted to sustain the President.

Earlier, the bill's sponsors had indicated they would not make a fight against the veto, because they did not believe they had the strength in th eSenate to get a two thirds majority required to override.

A controversy raged earlier this year around the same issue.

The principals at that time were the then Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and Edwin Pauley, close friend of Mr. Truman and the latter's nominee to the Undersecretary of the Navy.

Ickes told a Senate committee considering the nomination that

44 District-Bound Commuters Cheat Death As Bus Plunges From Memorial Bridge

Ethiopia Asks Italian-Seized African Areas

Return of Eritrea And Somaliland Demanded at Parley

Paris, Aug. 2 (AP).—Ethiopa asked the Peace Conference today to award her Italy's East African colonies of Eritrea and Somaliland, which seh said were "wrung from her by Italian aggression."

The first nation to make a claim to the 21 peace-drafting countries against the colonial empire Mussolini forged, Ethiopa—through her chief delegate Vice Foreign Minister Aklilou Abte Wolde—also said she expected to receive reparations from Italy.

The Ethiopian delegate made his country's claim for annexation of the two colonies despite the fact that the four-power Foreign Ministers Council agreed to shelve the Italian colonial question for a year. The ministers, however, had decided to return the Dodecanese Islands to Greece.

Other early victims of Mussolini's and Hitler's aggression—Czechoslovakia and Poland—preceded Ethiopa in airing their grievances and demanding security in the future.

Battle Over Chairman

The round of speeches followed a battle between the big and small powers over whether the post of conference chairman should be permanent or rotate among the four major powers. The small powers argued for a permanent chairman, suggesting President Georges Bidault of France, but Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov of Russia led opposition to this, and the Rules Committee adjourned a three-hour session without a decision.

Czechoslovakia's Foreign Minister, Jan Masaryk, opened the

Runaway Vehicle Hit Most Vulnerable Part of Balustrade, Between the Pillars

The architecturally beautiful but structurally vulnerable balustrade of the Arlington Memorial Bridge was never constructed to withstand the terrific impact it suffered yesterday.

National Park Service officials admitted this yesterday after a passenger-laden Arnold bus hurtled the bridge sidewalk and bowled over the guard rail balusters like so many ten-pins.

Metropolitan Police expressed doubts that even the strongest guard rail could have withstood the impact of the 15,600-pound runaway bus.

With its load of at least 44 passengers, the total load was estimated at 11 tons. Police estimated the speed of the bus at the time its steering gear was knocked out of control, sending the bus crashing across the bridge sidewalk, at 15 to 20 miles per hour.

The runaway bus hit the most vulnerable part of the bridge's balustrade, striking it between massive masonry pillars which support the balustrade over the bridge's 2163-foot span.

"Such a balustrade would take very little impact," a parks service official said. "You would never build a think like that to withstand such a severe impact."

The balusters supporting heavy masonry rail are made of granite from North Carolina quarries. They are held in place by a 4-inch brass "dowel," or spike, three quarters of an inch in diameter, two inches of which are imbedded in the base of the balustrade.

Curbstones Higher Now

Machine Drops 25 Feet to Roadway; 36 in Hospitals, Eight Are Released

At least 44 Washington-bound commuters cheated death at 7:45 a. m. yesterday when an Arnold Lines bus plunged through the granite balustrade of Memorial Bridge to a roadway 25 feet below.

The 36-seat bus, its driver vainly fighting a steering gear jammed in a collision with an auto, flipped over in the air and landed on its top a bus length from the edge of the Potomac River on the Washington side.

Three of the victims were in a critical condition last night and the condition o fa fourth was serious. They are:

Jeanne Mosedale, 20, of 2503 N. 16th st., Arlington, Navy Department employe, who suffered a possible skull fracture. She is in Emergency Hospital.

William Friess, 65, of 1106 N. Edgewood st., N. Arlington, who suffered a fractured collar bone, internal injuries and shock. He is in Emergency Hospital. He is the chief of the docket division of the Patent Office.

Stanley W. Daly, 56, of 2812 N. 12th st., Arlington, chief of the Dependents' Claim Section, Veterans Administration; fractured vertebrae. He is in Emergency hospital.

Mrs. Marjorie T. Mead, 25, of 4907 Washington blvd., Arlington, Naval Communications typist, who suered serious head injuries. She is in Casualty hospital.

By early today, 25 victims were at Emergency hospital, six were at Casualty, five at Bethesda Naval hospital, and eight had been released.

Drivers in Hospitals

Neither of the drivers was considered in serious condition. The operator o fthe bus, praised for his rescue work despite a severe scalp laceration and four broken ribs, was Robert M. Hills, 33, of 807 10th st. nw., a former soldier. He is in Emergency Hospital in fair condition.

Driver of the car was Stephen Lee Grover, 18, of 2900 Connecticut ave. nw. He is in Emergency Hospital with severe face lacerations.

Lieut. William J. Liverman, head of the police Accident Investigation Unit, said Grover's car apparently skidded on the wet paving blocks as he made the turn onto the north end of the bridge.

Liverman said the youth was attempting to pass another car, saw the bus and cut in quickly to get back into the lane. The bus was in the middle lane, obeying traffic regulations, AIU said.

Steering Rods Jammed

Grover's car struck the left front of the bus. The collision, which almost tore the motor out of Grover's car, jammed the steering rods on the bus.

The bus leaped a 10-inch curb, ripped out a 27-foot section of the balustrade, teetered on the edge, and then flipped over.

Distance Held Best Defense Against Atom

Evaluation Board Feels Fleet Might Have Been Disabled

President Truman's atomic bomb evaluators said yesterday that a combination of the Bikini underwater explosion with the overhead burst first tested might "effectively dispose of a fleet for many months.

"We are convinced," the Evaluation Commission added in a report on the offensive results of the second, underwater, test that "distance is the best defense."

The commission was headed by Senator Hatch (D., N. Mex.). It declared both Bikini tests "strongly indicate that future war employing atomic bombs may well destroy nations and change present standards of civilization."

Would Outlaw War

"To us who have witnessed the devastating effects of these tests," the commission added, "it is evident that if there is to be any security or safety in the world, war must be eliminated as a means of settling differences among nations."

A second report, made public simultaneously by the White House and the Joint Chiefs of Staff Evaluation Board, declared it is not too soon to point to the necessity for immediate and intensive research into several problems posed by the atomic bomb, adding:

"The poisoning of large volumes of water presents such a problem. Study must be given to procedure for protecting not only ships' crews but also the populations of cities against radiological effects as were demonstrated in Bikini Lagoon."

Sank Several Ships

The President's commission said both the first and second explosions sank several ships. It added that from the limited observation seven of its members had 11 miles away from the underwater blast, the ships remaining afloat within the damage area appeared to have been more seriously damaged by the aerial (first) explosion.

It said that damage to ships in the first test might have been far greater if the bomb had exploded "directly over" the target ship Nevada.

In the first test, the report continued, ship personnel would have received fatal doses of neutrons and gamma rays from the original deadly flash.

"On the other hand," it said, "the deadly effects of persistent radioactivity would have been much more severe in the second test."

The commission said results of both tests now being studied by the Navy's Bureau of Ships will "undoubtedly point the way to changes in ship's size, design and structure, both above and below the waterline."

"Such changes," it continued, "can offer increased immunity to flash and blast effect, but protection from catastrophe by deadly gamma and neutron radiations

Mead Committee Announces Ruling After Hearing of Unpaid $5000 Note

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Unless Representative Andrew J. May (D., KKy.) testifies on his connections with the Garsson munitions combine, the Senate Mead Committee will hold no further public hearings until after September 1, it was announced last night.

The committee's program was announced after an executive session in which evidence was received that May borrowed $5000 from a New York banker in 1041 to accommodate Murray W. Garsson and then failed to pay the loan.

Elisha Walker, partner in the New York Banking House of Kuhn, Loeb and Co., informed the War Investigating Committee yesterday that Garsson tried to borrow the $5000 from him in the spring of 1941.

May Brought Into Deal

When the banker showed "some hesitation," Walker testified, Garsson asked "whether I would be willing to make the loan on the note of Mr. Andrew J. May."

In announcing its future program, the committee said it would give first priority to a full-fledged investigation and public hearing into the question of defective 4.2 mortar shells.

Testimony received so far into the Garsson "paper empire" has brought out the fact that some defective shells exploded killing American soldiers. The Erie Basin Co., one of the Garsson network was the largest manufacturer of the 4.2 shell.

To Probe Highway Cost

Second on the priority list for future Mead Committee hearings will be completion of the investigation into the cost of building the Inter-American Highway, and the inquiry into the case of Col. Theodore Wyman, District engineer entrusted with the building of Pearl Harbor defenses.

Stating the objectives of its inquiries, the committee declared that it is principally interested "in the procurement and control functions as they are performed by Government officials and will examine not only existing laws and regulations but the people who administer them."

The committee served notice that it would give attention "to tax laws, amortization provisions, renegotiation, termination, the cost-plus type of contract, conversions from cost-plus to fixed-price contracts, the auditing of the expenditure of public funds, the payment of middlemen's profits, and brokerage fees in war procurement, instances of disloyalty and dishonesty on the part of public officials, and slip-shod business practices generally which have tended to increase the cost of the war."

In Emergency Only

In a formal mimeographed statement issued several hours after the executive session yesterday the committee announced that "except for an emergency" the full committee would hold no public hearings until after September 1.

Committee spokesmen later said the "emergency" referred to was an agreement by May to testify. It has already been made clear by the committee that May will be

100 Injured As New Jersey Trains Crash

Bayonne, N. J., Aug. 2 (AP).—A passenger-jammed commuter train plowed into the back of another passenger train at the West Eighth Street Station on the main line of the Central Railroad of New Jersey tonight, and police said "more than 100 persons" were injured and the trains turned into twisted and smoking wreckage.

A witness said he saw two bodies, those of the engineer and fireman, removed from the engine of the oncoming train, which was bound from Jersey City to Barnegat.

Police listed "40 or 50 persons" as seriously injured and admitted to hospitals, about half of them suffering from burns.

The engine of the oncoming train crashed into the last car of the standing train splitting it part way through its length, police said. The engine boiler then exploded, showering the wreckage with live steam.

Fire burst out in the wreckage within a few minutes after the col-

UNRRA Theft Stories Called Propaganda

LaGuardia Charge Doesn't Square With Facts, General Says

Lt. Gen. Sir William D. Morgan, supreme Allied commander in the Mediterranean, replying to UNRRA Director Fiorello LaGuardia's charge of supplies being "pilfered" in Trieste, yesterday said it was "not in accordance with the facts."

Noting LaGuardia's reiteration of his request for armed guards, Morgan declared that "the title to UNRRA supplies passes to the responsible importing government at ships' side, and thereafter security of supplies and provision of transit guards is responsibility of owning government."

Morgan said that he authorized unarmed guards of foreign nationals from Austria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Yugoslavia, and added:

"As a part of their [Yugoslava] program to force permission for Yugoslavs to carry arms in Venezia Giulia, large scale pilferage and holdups have been alleged of which in fact there has been no evidence and certainly none implicating civil or military police. For your information, American, British and Yugoslav troops are treated alike with regard to carrying arms in Venezia Giulia."

Morgan said that an UNRRA Port of Trieste Committee "has been unable to quote any figures for pilferage at the last five weekly meetings."

"This agitation for armed guards," Morgan went on, according to a War Department release, "appears to be a continuation of a widespread and long term propaganda campaign to discredit Allied Military Government in Venezia Giulia and this campaign has been well known to Allied Force Headquarters for several months past. In this instance the object apparently is to infer that such a state of lawlessness exists in Trieste, that the transit of supplies without armed escort is unsafe. Furthermore, it is more than likely that the allegations of large scale pilferage of Yugoslav UNRRA supplies is an attempt to account for quantities of UNRRA supplies which have reportedly been used for unauthorized purposes."

Landing Craft Left Panama July 24 for New Orleans

Sea and Air Search Begun; Vessels Carry 115 Crew Normally; Expected July 30

New Orleans, Aug. 2 (AP).—Naval and Coast Guard aircraft and surface ships searched the Caribbean Sea and the Gulf of Mexico today for three Navy landing craft mysteriously overdue on a voyage from Panama to New Orleans.

The ships, which normally carry crews totaling 115 officers and men, had not been heard from since they left Panama at 2 p. m. July 24. Their estimated time of arrival at the southwest pass of the Mississippi River was 2 p. m. Tuesday, July 30.

Eighth Naval District Headquarters, announced the vessels overdue, identified them as the LSM 484, LCI 883 and LC (FF) 656.

The LSM (landing craft, medium) is a vessel of 203 feet 6 inches length, 1095 tons displacement, with a normal crew of five officers and 54 enlisted men.

The LCI (landing craft, infantry) is 159 feet long, of 387 tons, with a normal crew of 3 officers and 25 men. The other ship is an LCI converted to serve as a flagship of an amphibious force, generally carries the same size crew.

The vessels were en route to the United States to be placed with the inactive fleet.

The ships had been ordered to proceed on a "direct route" to New Orleans at a speed of 10 knots. Naval officers explained this meant they would skirt the shallows on the Nica aguan-Honduran coast, then head part United States-owned Swan Island in the Caribbean, through the 150-mile-wide Yucatan Channel and across 600 miles of Gulf of Mexico to the mouths of the Mississippi.

The voyage totals about 1500 miles.

Naval officers suggested the possibility that the boats may have gone on the reefs off the Honduras-Nicaragua coast. However, they pointed out this would not account for the simultaneous failure of radio communication on all three vessels.

They believed it unlikely that the ships could have piled up on the reefs one behind the other, if they were keeping normal distances from each other.

A landing craft of similar size, which left Panama three days after the missing boats, arrived in New Orleans today and reported no trace of the others along the route.

Nats, Chisox Tied in Second

Food, Toys, Money Arrive Years Too Late—Jackie Is Dead

By Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

The sands ran out for 6-year-old Jackie Scandone at 12:30 a. m. yesterday.

The doctors at Johns Hopkins Hospital said the Clinton, Md., boy would live a year at most. He got not even that small respite.

He died as the presses were turning out his story.

So Jackie won't hear his new radio.

He'll never take that promised airplane ride.

He won't know the boyish thrill of sliding between clean, white sheets and studying gifts stacked by his bedside.

The story of Jackie, of a game youngster doomed by a creeping malignant tumor, of a home that was a barren mistake came too late.

Offers to assist the Scandone family flooded The Post yesterday. Some persons came to The Post. Others telephoned. Some sent checks by mail.

The Heroes' Flower

Gray Rubble of London Ruins Flaming With Wild Poppies

By Ed Creagh

London, Aug. 2 (AP).—Poppies, the heroes' flower, blossoming this week in London's bomb ruins.

They burst into flame amid the gray rubble-like torches lighted at dusk, the first wild poppies the city's center had seen since men covered the open fields with houses centuries ago.

Children rushed into the open cellars to pick the strange scarlet flowers, but few adults did. The popples grew where Londoners had died.

Other wild flowers, more than 100 varieties, had appeared in the charred wreckage earlier.

Now, along with the poppies, shrubs and small trees are filling the holes, masking the ugliness. A willow grows sturdily in a shattered tile floor near the Bank of England.

Woodland bracken climbs over exposed staircases. Ferns creep out of the damp walls of toppled houses. Few roofless churches lack wild flowers for the altars.

Some of the poppies sprang up around a wooden cross standing in the walled garden that was St. Swithin's Church for 600 years—until incendiaries burned everything but the walls.

There are benches in the garden and an old woman sat on one of them. She wore a poppy, a fresh one, on the tattered lapel of her coat.

"It was all right to pick one, wasn't it? she said. "My man is buried in Flanders from the other war and I lost a son in this."

She said she never had seen the poppies in Flanders Fields.

French Phone Strike

Paris, Aug. 2 (U.P.).—The French Postal Workers Union last night ordered a general strike of telephone and telegraph workers after wildcat walkouts had closed down all except emergency communications in 40 of France's 90 departments. The union did not set a date for the general strike, which would almost cut France off from the outside world.

Red Editor Smells U. S.-British Plot

Russian Magazine Insists Two Allies Want to Rule World

Moscow, Aug. 2 (AP).—The Russian magazine New Times asserted today that an American-British bloc was attempting to dominate the world and alarming "the real friends of peace."

In another of the long series of Russian criticisms of the United States, the official Communist Party newspaper Pravda attacked Chairman George Atcheson, jr., of the Allied four-power council for Japan, charging that he made rude attacks on Russian proposals for labor legislation and elimination of "fascist, militaristic literature" in Japan.

The asserted American-British bloc, New Times said, "already has brought serious hardships" to the Council of Foreign Ministers. The magazine said the "policy of betrothal of the two powers behind the backs of others undermines the very basis of international collaboration" and causes tension.

New Times said the alleged bloc, although its existence was officially denied, was discernible in operation in Japan, China, the Mediterranean, India and Greece.

"As though by silent agreement, the United States and England are giving each other freedom of action in certain regions of the world," the article said.

Pravda called Atcheson (a career diplomat with 25 years' service in the Orient) an "enemy of democracy." It accused Atcheson of trying to block the Potsdam decisions "by shouting about communism."

The Pravda article today was signed by K. Demidov. It said Atcheson forgot his role as chairman at meetings of the council, July 10, and again two weeks later, to attack proposals of the Soviet member, Lieut. Gen. Kuzma Derevyanko.

Tass Says U. S., Britain Strip Reich Industry

Moscow, Aug. 2 (U.P.).—The official Soviet News Agency Tass charged today that industrial plants in the American and British zones of Germany earmarked for Russian reparations had been stripped, looted or sold to German firms.

"As a result there is no industrial equipment or only incomplete units of no value at the present time in many plants listed for reparations," the agency said in a dispatch datelined from Berlin.

"Primarily this applies to plants in the aircraft industry, namely 10 aircraft plant branches of the Messerschmitt firm in the American zone from which all equipment has entirely disappeared.

"America nauthorities at Landsberg refused permission to inspect the Dornier aircraft plant, also on the reparations list, declaring that there was no equipment whatsoever in this plant.

"Similar facts also are noted for the British zone. For instance, occupation authorities at Hamburg ordered destruction of the experimental research basin, whose valuable equipment previously had been earmarked for reparations by the control council with British agreement."

Got the Nudes

Reporter Gave Pants For Story

By Edward Ellis

Roselawn, Ind., Aug. 2 (U.P.).—I gave my shirt today to get this story for you. And my trousers.

I "covered" the first postwar convention of nudists—the American Sunbathing Association—at Zoro Nature Park, a 200-acre farm where the only dressed creatures were the chickens.

Some 500 men, women and children, of every age and including entire families, came here for the three-day convention.

President Alois Knapp, Chicago, who owns the farm, said every State in the union was represented except Nebraska. That exception puzzled Knapp.

Most of the delegates wore only shoes. One woman wore a white turban to keep her wave in place.

We spent the morning playing volley ball and badminton and swimming.

One of the most interested of those present was a sociology student from Northwestern University He said he was assembling material for a master's thesis. He didn't believe nudists had ever been touched before—in a thesis.

Knapp said that the nudist movement is to promote "physical, mental and emotional health."

"If there were more nudists camps there would be fewer sex crimes," he said. The sex impulse is emphasized by the intricacies of clothes."

I was getting goose pimples in the hot sun, so I dressed and headed for the gates, where I found a sign which said:

"Please have clothes on when leaving park."

saddened to learn that Jackie had died.

One woman who came to The Post office said:

"It's a heart-breaking story . . . it's too bad things like that must go on . . . if only more people knew about these cases."

She gave $40. She left without revealing her name.

She was typical. Everyone wanted to help the Scandone family even if it was too late to help Jackie. Some offered cash. Others offered food, clothing, bedding, furniture, toys.

It all would have made Jackie smile. Not that he wouldn't have smiled anyway. He was smiling when a Post reporter talked to him 10 hours before he died.

And he didn't have much to smile about then.

But Jackie was a kid whose smile couldn't be wiped away. He smiled even when his bed was a clutter of rags on the floor. He was still able to smile when the family's food ran out.

Refuses to Cry

Jackie wouldn't cry even when his breathing became difficult. Perhaps he was closest to tears when they took his father, Paul Scandone, away in an ambulance last Monday.

The father, stricken with a serious kidney ailment, was taken to Prince Georges General Hospital. His condition is "satisfactory" the hospital reports.

Mrs. Scandone stayed by Jackie's bedside until dawn. Then she interrupted her vigil beside the shrunken and disease-torn body to run to the home of a neighbor and announce Jackie5s death.

One of the neighbors undertook the task of making funeral arrangements after the death certificate had been issued by Dr. James I. Boyd, Prince Georges County medical examiner.

Rites Set for Monday

Jackie's body was taken to the Ritchie funeral home in Marlboro. Funeral services have been tentatively set for 11 a. m. Monday in St. John's Church, Clinton. Burial will be Mount Olive Cemetery.

The man who arranged Jackie's funeral had been searching for a wheel chair the day before. Jackie liked the sun and he needed one.

"I've got one now, but it's too late," said the neighbor.

But not all the gifts intended to Jacfie will be too late. They will aid his destitute mother and father and three brothers.

Jackie wanted a radio. A new table model Philco was brought to The Post by Harper Dowell, factory representative of the Philco Corp.

And Jackie would have liked this: American Airlines called with an offer to take him for a ride in a special plane if he could make it.

A telephone operator at the U. S. Public Health office in Bethesda, Md., started a collection for Jackie. Workers at the office there contributed $80.34.

The medical and sanitation supplies division of United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration collected $27 and wrote a letter to Jackie telling him it would buy him a radio.

Because a radio had already been obtained, the cash was added to Jackie's fund.

Contributions included a $1 bill sent in by "an old soldier." There were checks of varying sizes. Others were in the mails.

Some persons brought in food. Others sent in clothing, blankets, sheets, towels, toys.

Jackie can well smile now. He left a needy family a sizeable legacy.

On the Firing Line in Athens . . .

Three McKinn County (Tennessee) war veterans fire shotgun and rifle shells at the Athens jail in Thursday night's battle

Ex-GIs Patrol Strife-Torn Tenn. County

Athens, Tenn., Aug. 2 (AP).—Former GIs, who backed up their ballots with bullets—and won—in a raging six-hour battle that left 18 wounded an dthe county jail in shambles, patrolled strife-torn McMinn County with rifles tonight to maintain order.

Sheriff Pat Mansfield, leader of an opposing faction in a feud of the polls, was nowhere around. He left after the veterans routed him and his deputies from the jail with demolition blasts early today after besieging them with fire from pistols, shotguns, rifles and at least one machine gun.

The bloody battle grew from a ballot count dispute in yesterday's bitter election contest between a GI slate and candidates of a long-dominant office-holding faction, headed by State Senator Paul Cantrell.

As proof of their victory at the ballot box—and with guns—the GIs tonight displayed a written statement from the secretary of the election commission that:

"Next Monday at 10 a. m. I will sign an election certificate certifying that the GI ticket was elected."

The victorious veterans late in the day turned back law and order in Athens itself over to Police Chief Herbert Walker but affirmed they were still "holding control" of the county and maintaining order.

Into just whose hands responsibility for the county finally would rest until Sheriff-elect Knox Henry is due to take over September 1, had not been decided. There was no immediate indication that Mansfield and his staff of deputies would resign.

State officials said last night martial law would be declared but decided against this step after the battle died down.

GI spokesmen asserted there would be no further violence. They said, though, if Mansfield returned he "might be roughed up a bit."

"Ready For Anything"

Jim Buttram, campaign manager for the GI ticket, said his men were "ready for anything that comes up." He asserted that they would not allow Sheriff Mansfield to resume his duties.

After they routed the sheriff and his force from the jail at 3:02 a. m., the veterans herded 34 special deputies into the "bull pen" of the jail. All except one were released during the day and sent to their homes.

At least two of the injuried in the gun battle were said tonight to be in serious condition. They were a constable with his left leg shattered by gunshot and a deputy shot in the face.

All except one of the officers, many of whom had been sworn in specially for election day service, were freed. Some were reported from out of town. A veteran spokesman said the officer held would be prosecuted for shooting a Negro yesterday after he had cast his ballot.

As the deputies left the jail and went to where they had parked their cars, they found them a mass of battered junk. The crowd had battered them, ripped wheels off, crushed tops and broke glass.

Election night found hundreds of the former GIs and friends gathered around the polling booths.

Eyewitness Story

An eyewitness to the beginning of the trouble, which later was to fill this town, located halfway between Knoxville and Chattanooga, with the sound of musketry, was James E. Harvis, managing editor of the Chattanooga Times.

Said Jarvis, "as we stood on a crowded sidewalk across the street from the polling place, which had closed to start the ballot counting, we saw the plate glass doors shattered by the impact of two bodies, those of two election officials stationed there by the all-GI ticket.

"The two youths were still on their knees when Deputy Sheriff Windy Wise strode out of the broken door, a pistol in his hand."

The veterans, said Jarvis, turned their backs on Wise and, hands held high, walked into the crowd. The veterans said they were breaking out of the polling place to report what they described as irregularities in election procedure.

Thereafter, events moved rapidly. A car filled with armed men drove up to the jail and then, while the crowd watched, a deputy entered the balloting place and removed the box. The car then sped to the jail.

Veterans Move on Jail

The ex-GIs, some 500 strong, moved on the jail, followed by seven deputies. Abruptly the veterans, some of whom learned street fighting the hard way in Europe, turned and engulfed the deputies.

Swiftly, the ex-GIs hustled the deputies into a garage, disarmed and beat them. Later, they were taken to an undisclosed destination.

As the veterans converged on the ail, the deputies hurriedly barricaded the place.

Sporadic firing broke out. Swiftly the veterans drifted back under cover and then, from somewhere, produced rifles and shotguns. The blunt blast of shotguns mingled with the sharper crack of rifles and the whine of ricochets grew steadier.

Under cover of darkness, the ex-GIs went into action with demolition charges—home made, but effective. After a third blast had rocked the jail, one of the deputies leaned from the building and shouted, "Stop that blasting. We'll give up—we're dying in here."

At 3:02 a. m., the officers began filing out of the battered building. They were searched, and roughly, by the attackers and marched back into the building to be locked in cells under guard of the ex-GIs.

Deputy Is Mauled

When Wise came out, several in the crowd surged forward and mauled him with fists and elbows before he could be returned to the comparative safety of the bullet-scarred jail.

Ralph Duggan, a former Navy lieutenant commander and apparent spokesman for the one-time servicemen, said, "We want everybody to know that we are going to be in charge and will dictate all terms to the other side."

He added that the former GIs, who recovered several ballot boxes from jail "are elected and will serve as your county officials, beginning September 1." He produced a statement from George Woods, a member of the county election commission, which said he "conceded the GI-candidates have been elected."

TEST

lies rather in wide spacing of task forces and decentralization of Navy yards, repair and loading facilities, of ships within port, and amongst all available harbors. We are convinced distance is the best defense."

The Civilian Commission said had the target array been manned, it seems clear that "casualties, both physical and psychological injury to personnel, would have been very great." It added: "Rescue and attention to casualties would have been difficult and dangerous. Within 2000 yards of explosion, ships would have been inoperative and a lapse of weeks might well ensue before relatively undamaged ships could again be used in combat."

In a supplement to its preliminary report on the aerial test, the joint chiefs of staff board said the location of the bomb burst, accurately determined from photographs, was such that "only one ship was within 1000 feet of the surface point over which the bomb exploded."

It added there were about 20 ships within half a mile, all of which were badly damaged, many being put out of action and five sunk. It required up to 12 days to repair all of those ships left afloat sufficiently so that they could have steamed under their own power to a major base for repair, said the report.

This board, reporting on the second test, referred to great quantities of radioactive water descending upon the ships from the column of water caused by the explosion or being thrown over them by waves.

"This highly lethal radioactive water," the board reported, "constituted such a hazard that after four days it was still unsafe for inspection parties operating within a well-established safety margin, to stand any useful length of time at the center of the target area or to board ships anchored there."

CONFER

plenary session with an announcement that his delegation "is going to have something to say about the treaty drafts for the German satellites which affectionately held Hitler's hand during the unspeakable period when Nazism became the government of the so-called Third Reich."

Masaryk told the delegates "it would be most difficult to persuade the people of Czechoslovakia to consider the idea of reverting to such or similar minority treaties as we have between 1919 and 1938."

Rights of Minorities

He was referring to the German and Hungarian minorities in Czechoslovakia, whose rights—protected by treaty—amounted almost to local autonomy.

"What happened to Bohemia as the result of her western neighbors and her German minority running amok you all know well," Masaryk said. "What happened to Slovakia as the result of the most ardent and early satellite activities of her southeastern neighbor (Hungary) is also a well established historical fact. We have had much more than our portion of scheming minorities."

Foreign Minister Wicenty Axymowsky of Poland told delegates that "when the time comes, we shall take an active part in the lasting settlement of the fate of vanquished Germany."

"We can never again allow Germany to play a preponderant part in the Danube Basin, the Balkans and the Baltic," he said. "And in no case can we permit Italy coming once more within the sphere of German influence."

In discussing Poland's fight for freedom, Rzymowski spoke not only of the fighting with the Red army, but also of the army of Gen. Vladislav Anders, which he said, helped "to crush the Germans in North Africa and on all the battlefields of Europe side by side with their British, American, Canadian, New Zealand and French comrades."

Wants Favorable Conditions

General Anders has been at odds with the current Polish government and thousands of his troops who fought in the Italian campaign have decided to go to England rather than return to Poland.

The Polish Foreign Minister said the peace conference must "create conditions favorable to the development of our Czech and Yugoslav friends."

Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada told delegates: "We in Canada felt that the measure of our participation in the war against aggression would have warranted a similar measure of participation in the decisions of peace.

"It would be unfortunate," he said, "if in this conference the real issues were to be obscured by any false antithesis between the interests of the larger and smaller nations."

He said he would like to see the four great powers consider promptly "any changes in the foreign ministers' proposals which are seriously suggested and supported by strong arguments."

Avoid Necessity of Votes

"I would suggest that the Council of Foreign Ministers meet from time to time during the conference to review and discuss proposals as they arise out of our deliberations."

This, he said, "would tend to avoid the necessity of votes and division."

During a morning session of the Procedure Committee a new dispute flared up between Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov and the Australian minister of external affairs, Dr. Herbert V. Evatt, over Poland's demand to sit on commissions dealing with Hungary.

ternational issues on which no precedent exists.

The Connally amendment was fought bitterly by Pepper and Senators Elbert Thomas (D., Utah) and Wayne L. Morse (R., Oreg.), the sponsors of the Wold Court legislation.

Langer, Shipstead Dissent

But all three went along with the Senate majority in supporting the final resolution, even with the limiting amendment.

The sole dissenters were Senators William Langer (R., N. Dak.) and Henrik Shipstead (R., Minn), the only Senators who voted against ratifying the United Nations Charter last year.

The compromise Social Security bill freezing old age insurance taxes at 1 per cent through 1947 was rapid-fired through the House and Senate yesterday and sent to the White House for President Truman's signature.

The only opposition to develop in the final test came from Representative Albert Gore (D., Tenn.), who contended that the bill left intact "the inequities of the old system."

But Gore offered no objection when the voice vote was taken on the measure.

The legislation, in addition to freezing the existing 1 per cent payroll tax for both employers and employes, increased the Federal contribution to social security programs in all states, beginning October 1, and brought 250,000 maritime workers under the unemployment compensation system.

The House-Senate conference battle centered largely around the issue of Federal grants to the various states.

In their 2½-hour parley Thursday night, the conferees killed a Senate provision which would have permitted the Federal Government to contribute as much as $2 for every dollar put up by poorer states.

Instead, they substituted a provision retaining the present 50-50 contributions but authorizing special Federal grants of $5 a month to the aged, poor and the blind, and $3 a monh for dependent children.

Service Over WTOP

The Rev. Raphael H. Miller, former pastor of the National City Christian Church and now editor of the Christian Evangelist, will conduct services over the Columbia network "Church of the Air" tomorrow. The program originating in St. Louis, Mo., will be heard here over station WTOP at 9:30 a. m.

Liquor Making Temporarily Halted Aug. 1

Manufacture of whisky was stopped by Government order at one minute past midnight Thursday morning, it was learned yesterday.

The order, issued by telegram from William MacArthur, head of the grain branch of the Commodity Credit Corporation, will be effective until a new formula for distribution of grain to distillers has been established. Such a formula is expected around August 15.

Since May 1, distillers have been limited to three 8-hour operations a month. This limitation was made in a war food order by Agriculture Secretary Anderson as a move to conserve grain for foreign famine relief.

Potato Alcohol Made

Thursday's motion, the department said yesterday, was taken after oldline distilleries had complained that under the war order their war-born competitors were getting an unfairly large share of grain.

The only distilleries in operation, it was stated last night, were "three or four" making alcohol from potatoes.

At the same time the Agriculture Department announced that substantial cutbacks are being made in food purchases for UNRRA.

Cutback on Canned Meat

Items upon which the cutbacks were ordered include about 28 million pounds of canned meat, and about 125 million pounds of dairy products, such as cheese, dried and canned milk.

The cutbacks, the department stated, were asked by UNRRA. The relief agency wants to use its remaining resources budgeted for food purchases, to buy cereals and other products that are cheaper in relation to calorie value.

Horse meat will not be affected by the cutback, the department said, "because of the nature of arrangements for its production."

Kenney Named Vice Chairman Of Chest Unit

Assistant Secretary of the Navy William J. Kenney has been appointed vice chairman of the Government unit of the 1947 Community Chest fund drive.

Kenney

Kenney, a native of Oklahoma and assistant Navy secretary since January, was named by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Edward H. Foley, who is chairman of the unit. He lives at 78 Kalorama cir. nw., with his wife and four children.

At the same time the Chest Federation announced quotas assigned to the eight units participating in the $4,200,000 campaign. They are $1,450,413 for the business unit; $1,790,202 for Government; $511,886, residential; $76,925, Alexandria; $60,485, Arlington, $43,634, Fairfax; $126,656, Montgomery; and $49,799, Prince Georges. Still unassigned is $90,000, which will be distributed among the units as the drive progresses, it was said.

The campaign, which opens October 22, is headed by Daniel W. Bell, member of the OPA decontrol board. t is the first peacetime drive uniting the six Community Chests of Washington and nearby counties and will raise funds for nearly 125 welfare agencies.

World Bank Bonds Urged For D. C. Firms

Treasury Secretary Snyder has sent Congress a proposed bill to let insurance companies operating under District laws invest funds in the International Bank for reconstruction and development.

Snyder pointed out in a letter that such investments are now barred by Title 35 of the District Code.

He pointed out that the Bretton Woods International Monetary agreement would eventually result in the International Bank's issuing for American investors securities "which may reach a value of many billions of dollars."

The securities, he said, "will be backed not only by the obligations of the countries to which loans are made, but also by the liability of the member countries upon their respective capital contributions."

"This and other provisions of the articles of agreement of the bank are aimed at giving these obligations a high degree of security, and the National Advisory Council believes, therefore, that they would constitute apprpopriate investments for insurance companies."

Snyder said that passage of the proposed bill would be "a further manifestation of the public policy which Congress has already proclaimed by its passage of the Bretton Woods Agreements Act."

The bill was referred to the House District Committee.

OIL

Pauley held out the prospect of 1944 Democratic campaign contributions from California oil men if Federal claims to the so-called tidelands were not pressed. Pauley denied this assertion.

Mr. Truman said Ickes could have been mistaken, and the Cabinet officer resigned in a huff. Later the President withdrew Pauleys' name.

In his veto message Mr. Truman stressed that the Justice Department has pending before the Supreme Court a suit against California to decide the question.

He said the court would act on the case next fall, and meanwhile its jurisdiction "should not be interfered with."

lision, Bayonne police said. Two alarms called all available fire equipment to the scene, and firemen were helping to remove victims from the torn railroad cars.

The engine and several cars of the oncoming train overturned. Rescue parties were removing the injured through windows they smashed in.

Bayonne Hospital officials said a number of injured had been admitted, but it knew of "nofatalities yet." They added a number of the persons being admitted were suffering from burns.

Occurs at Rush Hour

The collision was at 5:27 p. m., the Central Railroad said, at the height of the commuter rush when the trains are normally filled to capacity.

A railroad dispatcher said there were five passenger coaches on each of the two trains.

The dispatcher said the train in the station was bound from Jersey City to Barnegat on the New Jersey shore, and that the oncoming train was en route from Jersey City to Freehold.

All traffic on the division of the Central Railroad between New York and Elizabethport, switching point for westbound trains, was halted completely, the railroad announced.

Fourth Marine Dies in China After Ambush

Peiping, China, Aug. 2 (U.P.).—One of the 12 United States Marines wounded in a four-huor battle with ambushing Chinese Communists Monday died today, bringing the death toll to four.

Three other Marines were still in serious condition. A funeral for the three slain in the first minutes of the ambush was scheduled for 3 p. m. todya.

At least 12 Communists were killed.

(Gen. George C. Marshall, President Truman's peace envoy, discussed the ambush with Gen. Chou En-lai, the Communist representative at executive headquarters in Nanking, today.

(Marine headquarters charged that the Marines were killed or wounded in a "dastardly" ambush. The Communists said Chinese Nationalists were traveling with the Marines and that the Communists were attacked and "defended" themselves."

Reds Charge Bombing

Nanking, Aug. 2 (AP).—The Communist radio charged that Chinese government planes today bombed Yenan, capital city of Chinese Communism, even while negotiations ostensibly seeking peace and unity still proceeded in Nanking and Kuling.

Although unconfirmed, eeven the report of such an attack was regarded certain to blacken the already dark prospects of mediation between the two bitterly opposed factions.

Reds Lose Seven Villages

Nanking, China, Aug. 2 (U.P.).—The Communist News Agency admitted today that government troops had captured seven villages between Tienchang and Chuyi, in a two-pronged drive against a Communist pocket in the lake region above Nanking.

Missed the River— By just one bus-length, the Arnold operated carrier which plunged off Memorial Bridge yesterday with at least 44 passengers missed dropping into the Potomac River near the Watergate

Rescuer— Army Pvt. Leo H. Scotti, of Headquarters Co., Fort Myer, Va., reportedly was the first man to reach the wrecked bus and he began immediately to remove the injured. His sleeve is blood-stained. Scotti is examining the smashed, granite guardrail, which was held in place only by small brass spikes, inset in the stone (circle)

Ceiling Zero— Onlookers peer through the windows of the overturned Arnold bus, resting on its roof. The ceiling is where the floor should be. Note that the leather-upholstered seats fell to the ceiling and visualize how the passengers must have been sprawling into the front of the 15,600-pound bus by the first crash.

The metal bar on the ceiling which Bernard K. Harris, 28, of 1758 N. Troy st., Arlington, was holding snapped off in his hand.

"It seemed as if the bus hung forever in the air as it went over the side before we struck the pavement," said Mrs. Harold L. Vandever, 1023 N. Kenesaw st., Arlington.

"The bus seemed to be angling off course, then everything went topsy turvy. Next thing I remember is people falling and tumbling all over me."

Screams Follow Crash

Screams of the terrified injured, most of whom thought the bus was plunging into the river, followed the rending crash.

Twenty motorcycle policemen, 11 scout cars, 15 ambulances and 2 harbor patrol boats answered the first calls and Emergency Hospital's emergency receiving room was jammed with victims.

J. B. Capossela, hospital superintendent, said it was the greatest accident load the hospital has had in his memory. Elective admissions of a nonserious nature were held off until the victims were treated.

Three were released from Emergency, two from Casualty and three from the Naval Dispensary during the day.

Relatives Crowd Lobbies

Hospital lobbies were crowded with relatives and friends and telephone switchboards were clogged with inquiries.

Victims and wreckage of the bridge and bus were scattered over the scene as the least injured helped dazed and unconscious victims out of the bus. Company officials said safety glass and the metal top likely prevented a heavy loss of life.

H. L. Finnegan, 50, of 717 Silver Spring ave., Silver Spring, Md., who was on the bridge in a car, said there was "horrible screaming as the bus landed." Some women were hysterical. K. C. Hickerson, special officer of the United States Park Police, detailed to duty on the bridge, estimated speed of the bus as 15 to 20 miles an hour.

The Grover car, police said, was going "over 25 miles an hour."

"It happened so fast no one had a chance to start for the door—In case that would have done any good," said Jack Cobb from his hospital bed at Emergency. He lives at 1505 N. Longfellow st., Arlington.

Escaped Through Window

"There was a screech of brakes, then I saw a car in front of the bus being crushed, it seemed like. I felt the bus strike the curb, then over we went.

"I pulled myself out through a window."

Another injured occupant, Richard Fake, 2817 11th st. N., Arlington, was seated behind the driver. "Everyone in the bus seemed to fly forward. Somebody pulled me through a window after we crashed. He wanted to pull my right arm, but I knew it was broken, so I had him take my left."

One of the first arrivals at the wreck was Army Pvt. Leo H. Scotti, stationed at Fort Myer, who helped many of the injured out of the bus.

Joseph S. Rose, 37, of 1408 Cleveland st., Arlington, General Accounting Office employe, said he was seated in the rear.

"At the first crash, all the people standing fell down and then I could were going into the water and see out the front. I thought we after we hit I couldn't figure out why the water didn't come in.

"I was on the bottom of a pile of people, but I was the sixth one to get out."

He said an unidentified 'een-age boy did a "great job" of helping the people and ran all over the place trying to get them to stop smoking because of all the spilled gas.

Rose was loud in his praise of the bus driver. "He tried desperately to miss the car," he said.

Investigations Started

A prompt investigation of the crash was started by representatives of the Fire and Police Departments, Interstate Commerce Commission and District Commissioners.

H. H. England, general manager of the bus company, also began a probe. Lloyd Harrison, corporation counsel attached to the District Public Utilities Commission, said lacol safety regulations would not apply to the case because of the interstate nature of the Virginia bus traffic.

Passengers Injured in Bus Crash Listed

The following is a list of passengers injured yesterday morning in the Arnold bus crash at Memorial Bridge:

William Friess, 65, 1106 N. Edgewood st., Arlington. In critical condition with internal injuries, fractured collarbone and shock. He is chief of the docket division of the Patent Office. He has one married daughter.

AT EMERGENCY HOSPITAL

Jeanne Mosedale, 20, 2503 N. 16th st., Arlington, critical condition, with head injuries and possible fractured skull. She was in the operating room early last night. She is a Navy Department employe.

Stanley W. Daly, 56, 2812 N. 12th st., Arlington, critical condition, fractured vertebrae. Daly is Chief of Dependents' Claims Section, of Veterans Administration. He has four children.

was considered exceptionally high," a parks official said.

"In general, it is the curbstone which furnishes the most effective arresting force," parks officials said. "In newer bridges being constructed today curbstones are generally built much higher than they were 10 years ago."

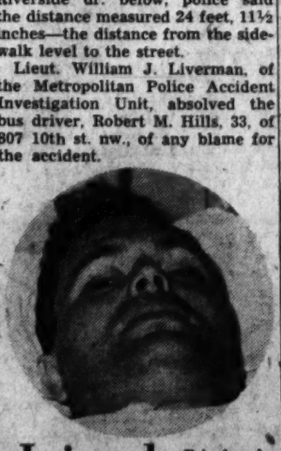
The Boundary Channel Bridge, actually a part of Memorial Bridge project, is built along identical lines as the main span.

Bus Driver Absolved

The structural scheme of the bridges—designed by McKim, Mead & White, of New York City—was required to follow low, flowing lines to give an unimpaired view of the Lincoln Memorial from the Virginia shore.

At the point where the bus plunged through the balustrade to Riverside dr. below, police said the distance measured 24 feet, 11½ inches—the distance from the sidewalk level to the street.

Lieut. William J. Liverman, of the Metropolitan Police Accident Investigation Unit, absolved the bus driver, Robert M. Hills, 33, of 807 10th st. nw., of any blame for the accident.



Injured— Richard Fake, 38, of 2817 11th st. north, Arlington, Va., another passenger on the bus, is in Emergency Hospital with a broken arm

Byrd Deplores Smear Tactics In Campaign

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 2 (AP).—Senator Harry F. Byrd declared tonight that politically-schooled "hatchet men" of the CIO-PAC, allied organizations and some of his personal enemies were conducting a smear campaign against him such as he had never seen in Virginia public life.

"My duties at Washington have prevented me from visiting many sections of Virginia," he said in an address prepared for delivery at a political rally, "so I am not fully familiar with the many false statements that have been made about me and my record, but I have been told enough to know that certainly not for many years have so many lies and influences been whispered and spread broadcast as in this campaign."

PAC "School" Cited

The incumbent candidate for the Democratic nomination for Senator said he would not "stoop to such tactics" and felt that neither would his friends. Then he added:

"If I cannot win on a high plane I do not want to win at all."

Senator Byrd said the Political Action Committee was using its "sinister influence" for the first time in Virginia politics and that its aim was "to destroy those who have refused to take its orders and make the candidate it opposes the target of false statements, half truths and innuendoes, all for the purpose of misleading the voters." He said the PAC conducted a political school in Washington for the purpose of training its "hatchet men" in the most effective methods of harming candidates it opposed.

Again Hits Pay Rumor

"The henchmen of the Political Action Committee of the CIO have gone throughout Virginia and quoted me as saying a dollar-a-day is enough for any man to earn, and many have believed this, although it is false to the core," Byrd said. "They have accused me of paying 9½ cents an hour to my apple pickers, and further made the accusation that I have sold large quantities of apples at high prices to England under lend-lease, and to the Federal Government.

"The facts are that I have never paid by the hour to have apples picked, but I have always paid by the crate at prevailing rates or more. I have never sold a bushel of apples to the Federal Government nor have I accepted the soil conservation payments, although I have been entitled to them as a farmer. I refused to do this because I resolved when I entered public life that I would never cash a check from the State of Virginia or the Federal Government except my salary check."

Byrd decried as "a cheap and contemptible trick to arouse the Negroes in Virginia against me," a radio speech earlier in the week by Frank L. Ball, jr., of Arlington, which Byrd said charged him with being "in collusion with Talmadge and Bilbo to stir up racial hatred in Virginia and in the South."

Resents Accusation

The Senator said he resented the accusation and denounced it as "maliciously false."

"As Governor of Virginia," he continued, "I did all I could to protect the true interests of the Virginia Negroes. I took a deep interest in their various institutions, the Virginia State College for Negroes at Petersburg, the Negro hospitals, the Negro tuberculosis sanatorium and other activities for their benefit. Under my administration appropriations for these agencies were greatly increased. I have never committed an act or said a word to bring about racial prejudice, as there is nothing I despise more than creating class antagonism."

The Senator pointed out that while he was Governor it was upon the recommendation that Virginia's antilynching bill was enacted—a law he described as "the most drastic antilynching law in the United States." The law, he added, subjects all members of a lynching mob to the charge of murder and empowers the Governor to send the attorney general into a county to prosecute and to spend State funds on the prosecution.

"From the day this law was enacted, 19 years ago," he said, "we have not had a lynching in Virginia."

Moral: Don't Jump To Conclusions

Baltimore, Aug. 2 (AP).—Charles Mack, employed by the park board as a laborer, today observed a man dig a hole and bury a box at the base of the equestrian statue of LaFayete in Mount Vernon Square.

Mack concluded the man had place da charge of dynamite and called police.

Gingerly, two patrolmen dug up the box and opened it with even greater caution.

Low Bids on Frederick Road Projects Listed

Frederick, Md., Aug. 2 (Spl.).—Low bids aggregating approximately $96,228 were received yesterday by the county roads board on three projects involving construction of 3.8 miles of highway in various sections of the country. The T. Edgie Russell Co., this city, was low bidder at $21,603.50 for grading, drainage and stabilized surfacing of 1.94 miles of the Rocky Ridge-LeGore rd.

The same firm, with a bid of $46,828.10 was low for 1.619 miles of macadam surfacing of the Gashouse Pike. The N. J. Groya Line Co., Frederick, submitted a low bid of $27,800.50 for surfacing of 1.007 miles of the Souder rd., near Brunswick.

Dr. Hooker, 70, Is Dead; Editor And Professor

Baltimore, Aug. 2 (AP).—Dr. Donald R. Hooker, teacher, civic leader, and editor of medical journals, died at the Johns Hopkins Hospital last night after several months' illness. He was 70.

He was associate professor of physiology at the Johns Hopkins Medical School but resigned his teaching duties some time ago to devote himself to research and editing the American Journal of Physiology and the Physiological Reviews.

Doctor Hooker was one of the founders of the latter publication in 1921.

Born September 7, 1876, in New Haven, Conn., he received a bachelor of arts degree from Yale University in 1899 and that of master of arts two years later. He received the doctor's degree from Johns Hopkins University in 1905.

He then traveled in Europe, after which he was named an instructor on the Johns Hopkins Medical School staff. In 1910 he was made an associate professor.

In 1914, he became managing editor of the American Journal of Physiology, continuing in this post and that of editor of Physiological Reviews until his death. In 1935, he became secretary of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

He founded the Roosevelt Park recreation center in Baltimore more than 30 years ago, and he and Mrs. Hooker presented the city with $2500 towards the establishment of a recreation center for Negroes.

He married Miss Edith Houghton in 1905. Surviving are his widow, and their five children, Dr. Donald Houghton Hooker, Annapolis; Dr. Houghton Russell Hooker, New York City; Mrs. Peter Gring, Syosset, N. Y.; Miss Edith H. Hooker, jr., and Mrs. George esterlind, both of Baltimore.

Funeral services will be held at the Church of the Redeemer tomorrow. Burial will be in Evergreen Cemetery, New Haven, Conn.

The funeral will be held here Saturday afternoon.

John E. Nelson

Winchester, Va., Aug. 2.—Funeral services will be held tomorrow for John E. Nelson, 82, retired merchant at Hayfield, who died Thursday. He was born at Capon Bridge, W. Va., and leaves his widow and eight children, two by a former marriage. Three brothers and sisters also survive.

Mrs. Annie M. Graham

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 2.—Services were held from the home at Inwood, this afternoon for Mrs. Annie May Graham, wife of A. W. Graham, who died in a local hospital Wednesday night. She was active in church and farm women's club work. Surviving are the husband; a foster son, Roscoe D. Watts; three foster grandchildren; one sister, Mrs. William Hivick, Great Cacapon, W. Va., and one brother, Roy C. Henry, this city.

Robert M. Motley

Newport News, Va., Aug. 2 (AP).—Funeral services for Robert M. Motley, pioneer citizen and retired merchant, who died last night at his country home, Numrod Hall, in Bath County, will be held here tomorrow afternoon.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Fred Coover, of this city, and Mrs. Frank Howard, Frederick, Md., and three grandchildren.

Crops Damaged, Roads Blocked In Fauquier County Floods

Warrenton, Va., Aug. 2 (Spl.).—Crop and property damage in widely scattered sections of Fauquier County, blocked highways and electric power interruptions resulted today from flash floods which followed heavy rains during an electrical storm.

Several small bridges on roads near Marshall, in northern Fauquier, were reported to have washed away.

On the basis of information reaching Warrenton, individual losses appeared comparatively light in most cases, but it was generally believed that total damage in the county might run high.

Farm lowlands along virtually all streams were inundated with resultant damage to crops and buildings. Traffic was delayed in half a dozen sections when swiftly rising waters overran their banks and covered highways and bridges.

Blocked Roads Listed

Among these roads were Route 15, South Route 17, to Fredericksburg and Route 28. A. T. Arnold, resident highway commissioner, was busy throughout the day directing road forces assigned to the clearance of blocked roads and temporary repairs to permit resumption of travel.

Persons living along Cedar Run, in the vicinity of Catlett, feared the high waters would do heavy damage in their areas, since the normally small stream had risen about 15 feet and spread over a wide acreage of farmlands. This afternoon the property of Mrs. Blanche Laws was submerged except for houses and other buildings on the highest ground. State Route 233 was covered by the flood waters and traffic was blocked.

The town of Remington was hard hit. A barn belonging to Tom Ott was struck by lightning and burned, together with hay and farm equipment about 1:30 a.m., but residents who helped fight the fire saw no indication then of a flood. About an hour after they returned to their homes, they said, Tin Pot Run had over-run its banks and swept several hundred yards into the town. At one point near a culvert, this creek rose quickly to a height of about 16 feet covering the main line of the Southern Railway for a distance of 400 to 500 yards.

Trains Slowed Down

A fast southbound passenger train, powered by a Diesel engine, ploughed through the waters, which were more than a foot and a half above the tracks, they said. But debris floating over the railroad bed caused no trouble. Trains operating along the line later in the day, proceeded slowly in all flooded areas.

Residents of Remington reported losses to their poultry flocks by drowning. Many fences were washed down and farm buildings were damaged. Charles Boleyn, special officer at Remington, said an official measurement showed that the Rappahanock River reached a crest of nearly 16 feet at 7:30 a.m. The river stage had fallen to 12.65 feet at 4p.m.

Officials of the Virginia Electric & Power Co., said their most serious trouble occurred near Meetze, where a transformer washed out and disrupted service temporarily. The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Virginia, said it had received no reports of line breaks as a result of the storm or flood.

3 Full-Time Aides To Investigate Idle Aid Claims

Baltimore, Aug. 2 (AP).—The Maryland Unemployment Compensation Board was preparing a close scrutiny of the status of all claimants today after disclosing it would hire three full-time investigators.

Walter D. Owens, State employment commissioner, said last night he had authorized the board to hire the investigators on a salary scale from $2280 to $2850.

While declaring the three men had not yet been appointed, Paul Morsenberger, in charge of the agency in the absence of Manager Stephen Cromwell, confirmed that they would be added to the UCB staff.

At the same time, Owens disclosed that his department had completed a survey of all UCB staff employes. A report on the findings will be made within the next few days to Chairman Russell S Davis of the unemployment compensation board.

Charlottesville Firm Makes Nylon Hosiery

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 2. Spl.). The Frank Ix and Sons Mill, whose looms during the war turned out parachute cloth for the Air Forces, are working on an expansion program which has already spread beyond the ivy-colored brick building on Ware st.

With an eye on America's peacetime essentials, the company has added to its affiliate corporation, Franklin Fabrix, the making of nylon stockings. Now being turned out on a small scale due to lack of space and of trained employes, the seamless nylons are being fashioned in the basement of the annex to the old Midway School.

"The quarters are only temporary," said W. M. Bickley, superintendent. "As soo nas our machines and help are ready, and we can move into a larger buildnig, we will make nylons on a large scale."

Young Couple Badly Beaten While on Beach

Virginia Beach, Va., Aug. 2 (AP). William Shell, 20, and Jean Carter, 17, of Crewe, remained in serious condition today in Norfolk hospital as a result of severe head injuries inflicted by an unidentified assailant as they sat on a beach listening to music from a portable radio.

Police Chief C. E. Hobeck, who withheld information of the case until last night, said the couple was attacked Wednesday about 4 a. m. Shell in a semiconscious condition, made his way from the beach to the establishment he was visiting. Police went to the beach and found Miss Carter unconscious. Shell lapsed into unconsciousness shortly afterward.

Neither of the victims was able to give an account of the attack. Hobeck said there was no indication that robbery was the motive.

Hospital attendants reported today that Miss Carter's condition was fair but that she still was unconscious. Shell had regained consciousness and was to be operated on later today.

Virginia FFA Seats Mannon As New Head

Blacksburg, Va., Aug. 2 (AP).—The Virginia Association of the Future Farmers of America will be headed during the ensuing year by Carnice E. Mannon, of Floyd.

Mannon was installed as president of the organization at the closing session yesterday of the annual convention of the group at Virginia Tech. Inducted into office to assist him with FFA problems and policies in Virginia during the year were Bally Ward, of Turbeville, vice president; Kenneth Anderson, of Amelia, secretary; Hudson West, of Battlefield Park, treasurer, and Paul Vargo, of Disputanta, reporter. Named to the executive committee were Edward Goode, of Rocky Mount, retiring president; William K. Brower, of Fisherville, and Billy Sampler, of Dayton.

Wampler also was announced as the winner of the $100 first prize in the statewide FFA public speaking contest in which John Cleaton, of Lacrosse, and Ralph Gardner, of Woodlawn, placed second and third, respectively.

Three other $100 prizes for special achievement went to William Sommons, of North River, who won the farm mechanics foundation award for accomplishments in farm shop work; Hubert Pratt, of Spencer Penn School, who was presented the farm and home electrification foundation award, and Anderson, the new FFA secretary, who received the State farmer foundation award.

Man of Decision Saves Fish Catch

Scottsburg, Va., Aug. 2 (AP). Frank Edmondson made a safe landing by the seat of his pants.

He was in a rowboat.

He was fishing with Bill McCall and both Scottsburg men caught nice strings of fish several miles up river from Staunton River Park. But on the way back to where they had left their automobile the boat hit a sunken log which tore a hold a foot in diameter in the bottom.

Both men were strong swimmers and there was no danger, but they had a motor in the boat and the results of a good day of fishing.

So Edmondson, a man of decision, sat in the hole and, aided by rapid bailing, managed to stem the inrush of water until they could make shore safely.

Va. Widow Wins Legal Fight On Communist Party Bequest

Luray, Va., Aug. 2 (AP).—The will of the late Lester Ruffner, vice president of the Community Party in Virginia, who left his estate to the Communists with the proviso that his "house by the side of the road" would be occupied by a "tried and true Communist leader," has been successfully contested by Ruffner's widow, a non-party member.

Judge H. W. Bertran ruled in Page County Circuit Court that Mrs. Ruffner was entitled to her full dower rights, which under Virginia law would be a third of the real estate outright or the use of all of it for the rest of her life. The will left the home, valued at approximately $10,000, other real estate, bonds and property, to Mrs. Alice Burke of Richmond, and Daniel Kibler of Luray as trustees for the Virginia Communist Party.

The will provided that Mrs. Ruffner should receive the livestock on the place and be paid $20 a month by the Communists.

Ruffner, whose Virginia ancestry included a president of Washington College, now Washington and Lee University, and the first state superintendent of public instruction, had been a follower of Pacifist Eugene V. Debs, a Socialist, and ran for Congress on the Communist ticket in 1940. He died January 10 this year.

His will stipulated that "a tried and true Communist leader be given the right and privilege to reside in my said home place so long as he remains true to and lives by said principles of said party."

Judge Bertram's order, entered yesterday, declared Ruffner died interstate and that the bequests to the Communist trustees "are too vague, uncertain and indefinite to create an ordinary private trust." It also ruled that a charitable trust "cannot be created for a purpose which is illegal, contrary to public policy, or is subversive of all recognized religions or is hostile to thhe existing form of Government of the United States or advocates its overthrow by force and violence . . ."

Stalemate Seen As Danville Bus Strike Continues

Danville, Va., Aug. 2 (AP).—The Danville bus strike entered its fourth day this morning with union drivers resuming negotiations with officials of the Danville Traction & Power Co.

For five hours yesterday the negotiations were in progress resulting, at the end of that time, in a penny-an-hour increase in base pay while Danville people still walked or hitchhiked to work. Today the issues were union shop, what rate should be paid for overtime and Sunday work, and whether paid vacations should be allowed.

It was reported this morning that the city council might meet and act if the strike is not settled by tonight. The base pay agreement is 88 cents an hour. The drivers asked for $1.

City Councilman Earle Garrett has sent a letter to Mayor W. E. Gardner asking him to declare an emergency and to take over the bus system in order to bring an end to what he terms a serious lack of public transportation.

Dr. Kieffer Heads Md. Blue Cross

Baltimore, Aug. 2 (AP).—Dr. Richard Kieffer, Baltimore surgeon, was appointed medical director of the Associated Hospital Service (Blue Cross), it was announced today.

Blue Cross collects monthly fees in return for hospitalization it provides when required, and after formulation of a working plan medical service will be supplied in the same manner, officials said.

The last General Assembly authorized the extension of Blue Cross service to medical care. Cooperation of Maryland's physicians will be necessary to realize the plan.

Born in Hagerstown June 15, 1886, he attended Hagerstown public schools there and took his M.D. at Johns Hopkins University in 1913.

Joseph Arnold, 60, Dies, Lucketts Area Farmer

Leesburg, Va., Aug. 2 (Spl.).—Joseph F. Arnold, 68, farmer of the Lucketts' community, died early this morning at his home near Lucketts after a short illness.

He was born and spent his entire life in that community. He was a member of Faith Chapel Presbyterian Church. Unmarried, he is survived by one sister, Miss Mattie Arnold, who resided with him.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. Sunday from Slack's funeral home in Leesburg with burial in Leesburg Union Cemetery.

Indirect Effects Of DDT Spraying Kill Small Fish

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 2 (Spl.).—Indirect effects of DDT sprayed experimentally are causing deaths of fish here, Eugene Surber, aquatic biologist at the Federal Fish Hatcheries at Leetown, in charge of the recent experiment on Back Creek, said today, qualifying somewhat the instant conclusion that fishlife itself had not been harmed.

He said 64 fish have been found dead whereas only one was found dead immediately following the spraying from a plane of the one-mile section more than a week ago.

Surber said the 64 fish apparently died from the effects of feeding on water insects which had been killed by the DDT. Practically all the dead fish found were of a small size. Surber said, indicating the larger fish could withstand the effect of eating the poisoned insects.

Scientists hoped the DDT in water solution woul danswer the problem of using DDT in areas of using DDT in areas where there are streams. Previously, DDT in oil had proved fatal for large numbers of fish.

Proposed Magothy Airport Location Draws Protest

Baltimore, Aug. 2 (AP).—Location of the proposed Naval Academy airport on the Magothy River in Anne Arundel County would "damage property values" in the opinion of John R. Sherwood, school board member and oil company official.

Sherwood sent a telegram to Mayor McKeldin yesterday protesting the Magothy River location. His wire stated the site would be a "duplication of Patuxent Air Station," that it would create a source of extensive claims against the Government for damages and that it would create a hazard to thousands of "persons using area for residence and recreational purposes . . ."

In the absence of McKeldin, who is vacationing in Maine, city hall officials turned the telegram over to Roert O. Bonnell, chairman of the Baltimore Aviation Commission.

Fire Razes Md. House; Two Dogs Rescued

Eckhart, Md., Aug. 2 (AP).—Fire, believed to have originated in an oil stove, destroyed the six-room frame house occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Andrew T. Valentine here shortly before noon today. Nothing was saved from the house.

The blaze was discovered by Mrs. Valentine when she returned home after picking berries. Robert Andres, a war veteran who lives nearby, broke down a door to rescue two collie dogs that were locked in the burning house. No one was injured.

Orchard Grass Petition

A petition for a Government loan rate or support price of 90 per cent of parity for orchard grass seed was presented by county agents and a committee of growers from Prince William, Loudoun and Fauquier counties at a conference with USDA officials in Washington recently. With an estimated 1946 orchard grass seed production of more than twice that needed, this action was taken as an effort to prevent ruinous prices on the present crop. The promise of a definite answer to the petition within the next 10 days was received. Approximately 37 per cent of the entire commercial orchard grass seed crop is produced in the northern Virginia counties.

BARNABY
By Crockett Johnson
We went in a body to the Mayor's office. And gave him the petition. With a thousand signatures . . .
Then I made a speech. The people want real housing, I said. Not a lot of make-shift—
My Fairy Godfather signed, too, Pop. By mistake. But—
That should be a great help, son.
Look, Mr. Mayor. O'Malley's name. Now we're sunk.
The double-crosser!

PUC 'Tosses Towel' On Taxi Rates to Va.

Airport, Pentagon 'No Man's Land' Under New Ruling

The National Airport, Pentagon and areas of Virginia beyond the Potomac River bridges yesterday became a "no-man's land" as far as efforts to control taxicab rates from the District are concerned.

The Public Utilities Commission late yesterday figuratively "threw in the towel," in one stroke abolishing two subzones on the taxicab rate map on the Virginia side of the river.

The PUC action was taken in view of an act of Congress defining the boundary line between the District and Virginia as the "mean high-water mark on the Virginia shore of the Potomac River."

The Act, passed October 31, 1945, also provides that exclusive jurisdiction of the National Airport shall be in the hands of the Federal Government.

PUC officials said that from now on penny-wise taxicab patrons headed for Virginia would do well to sound out the cabbies on the fare before starting for their destinations.

The suz-zones abolished set up rates of 90 cents for one person and 50 cents per person for group riding to the Airport and Pentagon.

Efforts of the PUC to control rates between the District and the Airport hit a snag recently because of a Civil Aeronautics Authority contract with the Airport Transportation Service Inc.

The contract set up taxicab and limousine service into and out of the airport at the rate of 75 cents per person. District cabs bringing fares from the District to the airport were prohibited from picking up passengers for the return trip.

Washington cabbies rebelled against this set-up by refusing to take passengers headed for the airport.

The area just beyond the 14th st. Highway Bridge has long been the subject of conflicting purisdiction claims between the District and Virginia.

PUC officials, however, in withdrawing claims to jurisdiction over the Virginia side taxicab rates, recognized the boundary line as defined by Congress.

Daughter Hurt

Butler Held As Murderer Of Woman

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
MARJORY JEAN LOGAN
of Mineola, N. Y., pictured in a Wac uniform last year, identified a 23-year-old butler as the man who raped and shot her and killed her mother, July 24, police said

Mineola, N. Y., Aug. 2 (AP).—A 23-year-old Negro butler and chauffeur confessed today, Police Capt. Stuyvesant Pinnell said, to slaying socially prominent Mrs. Marjory Church Logan, 52, and attacking and wounding her daughter, Marjory, 26, nine days ago.

Pinnell said the man, Ward Beecher Caraway, had been booked on a charge of murder.

Caraway was taken to Nassau hospital where Miss Logan is recovering from wounds in the face and neck.

Assistant District Attorney Philip Huntington said the former Wac sergeant looked calmly at Caraway and said: "He is the man. There is no question about it."

Caraway was taker to Flower Hill, where the Logan home is located, and assisted detectives in finding two of three sections of a revolver. Pinnell quoted Caraway as saying he had thrown the weapon away after the crimes.

Caraway's arrest followed a police check of servants in the homes of neighbors of the Logans. The check led them yesterday to the eastern Long Island village of Southold, where Mr. and Mrs. James M. Rose, Flower Hill residents, have a summer home.

Police said Caraway resembled the description they had and when he failed to establish an alibi for July 24 they brought him to Mineola.

District Attorney James M. Gehrif said no attempt had been made to learn the motive for the shooting.

Miss Logan had said a Negro entered the house and demanded money from her mother. She said she tossed $10 down the stairs. Then, Miss Logan added, the man ran up the stairs, seized a roll of bills from her, and at gunpoint forced her into a bedroom, where he raped her and then shot her twice.

Child Recovers From Rare Tick Paralysis

Three-year-old Carole Williams, brought to Children's Hospital a week ago with her limbs paralyzed from what first appeared to be polio but later turned out to be a rare tick disease, stood up in her crib yesterday.

Hospital officials said that she has recovered completely and soon will return to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Williams, of Leesburg, Va.

The blonde little girl was admitted to the hospital last Saturday as a possible infantile paralysis victim but doctors were baffled because, other than paralysis, she had none of the symptoms of polio. They noted that the paralysis which first affected her legs crept up until she was unable to move her arms.

Then an examination disclosed that a tick embedded in her head an inch above her left ear was emitting a poisonous fluid into her blood stream.

Almost miraculously an hour after the tick was removed Carole began to regain the use of her arms. Now she plays in her crib as well as any three-year-old.

The disease, which is so rare that the doctors at Children's at first could find no record of it in their medical journals, is the first known case in Washington. It occurs in isolated instances in the south and west and often is fatal.

Unless the tick is removed in time the paralysis reaches the respiratory system.

The tick, a doctor at the hospital said, was the comon variety found on dogs in the east—the dermacentor variabilis. He could not say how frequently such a tick becomes affected.

Post General May Testify In Army Thefts

Baltimore, Aug. 2 (AP).—Federal Judge W. Calvin Chestnut today requested that the commanding general of Aberdeen Proving Ground be summoned into court for questioning in connection with alleged laxity in the care of surplus Army material.

The judge asked that the post commander be present in court when a probation report is to be submitted on an Army captain and a sergeant, who pleaded guilty today to charges of stealing refrigerator compressors from Aberdeen.

Capt. Louis A. Giaconna, 22, Union, N. J., and Sergt. Walter Sherno, 27, father of one child, who lives near Aberdeen, were the defendants.

Two Sergeants Fined

Two Army sergeants, one a restaurant proprietor, were sentenced and fined in another case before the court.

Both admitted thefts of more than 1000 pounds of butter, over 6000 pounds of sugar, 40 cases of tomatoes and a dozen cans each of tuna fish and chicken from a food distributing warehouse at Fort George G. Meade.

A sentence of 18 months in Federal prison and a fine of $1000 was imposed on Sergt. John DiNatale, and a sentence of six months and a $500 fine on Sergt. Lamar S. Sutton.

Thefts 'Looked Easy'

Both testified they committed the thefts because "it looked easy."

After an FBI agent told the court that there were "considerable and numerous thefts around all Army posts," Judge Chestnut began inquiring further into such cases.

Replying to a question by Chestnut, Anthony Purcell, assistant U. S. attorney with more than four years of military service, said, "There is so much surplus and loose materials lying around camps and depots that anyone with an inclination to steal can easily make off with it."

CAA Approves Constellation 'Bug' Changes

The Civil Aeronautics Administration announced last night it has approved modifications for the Lockheed Constellation which will permit the giant passenger plane to return to regular airline service soon.

The announcement followed a meeting of Government officials with representatives of the airlines and manufacturers concerned.

The CAA said the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. expects to complete the changes on a number of planes within three weeks. The modifications will be made in the shops of the airlines.

Four-Way Agreement

CAA Administrator T. P. Wright said in a statement that "these changes embody the recommendations of Lockheed, Wright Aeronautical Corp., the airlines and the CAA. We are confident that when they are made this advanced transport plane will carry on the great safety record of United States aviation which has been achieved by continuous cooperation of manufacturers, airlines and Government."

The CAA said the principal changes to be made are:

1. Additional fire extinguisher protection in the rear section of the power plant installation.

2. Installation of improved exhaust collector rings.

3. Replacement of bulkhead electrical connectors with redesigned assembly and of aluminum conductors in generator circuits with copper cables.

4. Insulation of circuit breakers to eliminate shorting, or their replacement with copper fuses.

Other changes involve redesign of certain items in the electrical and hydraulic systems.

Flight Tests Planned

The CAA said that in addition to the engineering changes, flight tests will be made by the manufacturers before the Constellation is returned to service.

It added that improved operating and maintenance techniques for carburetor engines will be incorporated in the operating certificates of the airlines.

The CAA suspended the flying certificates of the Constellation on July 11 after the crash of a TWA training plane near Reading, Pa. The Constellation, which was being used by the airline in training flight crews, caught fire and crashed, killing five members of the crew and seriously injuring one.

The CAA announcement added: "The CAA considers the Constellation design to be fundamentally sound and with the improvements in equipment being made, we will have no hesitation about approving it for use by the public, whose agents we are."

Hill Attacks Pearl Harbor Lack of Unity

By the Associated Press

Senator Hill (D., Ala.) declared yesterday there is "no unity of command at Pearl Harbor" but "the same organization for defense that obtained on Sunday, December 7, 1941," when the Japanese took the island bastion by surprise.

"We are right back where we started," he declared in a speech prepared for Senate delivery.

"General Hull commands the Hawaiian Department—the Army—he does not command the Navy.

"Admiral Hall comands the Fourteenth Naval District — the Navy—he does not command the Army."

Unification Favored

Hill spoke in favor of armed forces unification, an issue now admittedly dead for this session of Congress.

As a member of the Military Committee and an ardent advocate of unification, Hill said he decided to lay the case for the legislation —which never reacheed the Senate floor—before his coleagues as a result of an antiunification speech delivered in the chamber last week by Senator Hart (R., Con.) a retired admiral.

Hill said that Naval officers are toasting the failure of Congress to act on the legislation "exactly as they would toast a Navy football victory over the Army."

"The difference between the Navy's unselfish devotion to duty in the war and the present selfish attitude of those in high authority in the Navy toward the President and the best interests of the national defense is appalling," he asserted.

Hill said Hart tried to make the Senate believe that "this whole scheme of unification is a vast Army plot to "sink the Navy" cooked up by former West Point cadet generals bearing an Army-Navy football grudge, against former middy admirals."

Navy League Cited

Hill contended that the only organized opposition to unification is "the Navy Department with its Navy league." He described the league as "primarily a group of steel and munitions makers whose biggest customers are the Navy."

"Many of them are also members of the Army Ordnance Association," Hill added.

"It is interesting to note that the Army Ordnance Association is not supporting unification either. Why? Because there is obviously more money in selling steel and munitions to two competing and duplicating military and naval procurement agencies than to only one."

He said that while the public thinks of General MacArthur as the supreme commander in the Pacific, he is not because he does not command the Navy.

Hill, however, saw hope for enactment of a unification law in the next Congress.

Pie Company License Probe Told of 'Dirt'

Improperly covered food and evidence of rodents and insects at the plant of the Connecticut Pie Co. were described to a District license revocation board yesterday by two city food inspectors.

These and a list of other insanitary conditions were allegedly found at the local baking plant at 3159 O st. nw. during 10 inspection trips between aJnuary 30 and June 14 of this year, the inspectors reported.

Challenging almost every charge of the inspectors yesterday was Rudolph Behrend, president of the pie company who acted as counsel for his company.

The board has ordered the company to show cause why its license should not be revoked because of the alleged violations of sanitation regulations.

Inspector Kenneth Roberts admitted under questioning by Behrend that many of the conditions had been corrected. He denied Behrend's statement that Roberts early in June declared the company was one of the cleanest bakeries in the city.

The hearing was recessed until 10 a. m. next Thursday.

Hearings held yesterday in the New Municipal Center, will be transferred to Room 203 of the old District Building next week. A Health Department inspector and a bacteriologist will be called to testify on pie company food samples tested in Health Department laboratories, according to Board Chairman John O'Dea.

Talks of Trials

Jackson Here, Reticent on Intentions

Supreme Court Justice Robert Jackson is welcomed home with a kiss from Mrs. Jackson

By the Associated Press

Justice Robert H. Jackson returned from Nuernberg yesterday, saying he plans to resume "my normal work" but refusing to answer a direct question as to whether he will stay on the Supreme Court.

The question was prompted by his public criticism of a fellow justice, Hugo L. Black.

Jackson told reporters who met him at the National Airport that he would comment only on the war crimes trial where he is the United States prosecutor. Asked specifically about returning to the bench, Jackson said:

"I won't have anything to say except about Nuernberg."

Shortly after Fred M. Vinson was named Chief Justice to succeed the late Harlan F. Stone Jackson issued a statement while abroad June 10, critical of Black's participation in deciding a case in which a former law partner represented one party. Black has not commented.

When he may return to Germany, Jackson said, "depends on the course of events there."

Before his departure from Nuernberg Wednesday, Jackson said he would be gone only temporarily, planning to return by mid-September.

Jackson said he had no definite plans for the immediate future beside going for at least a few days to his home at Langley, Va. He said he might find time to visit his former home at Jamestown, N. Y.

Referrin gto the Nuernberg trial of Nazi war prisoners, Jackson said the prosecution had presented since last November the "most closely documented case in the world's history."

Documents seized from the Germans, he said, convinced him beyond doubt that crimes had taken place "which I did not believe before could be committed in the twentieth century."

"Our hope is that the trial to some extent at least will deter future international aggression," Jackson said.

The justice was accompanied by his son, Naval Lieut. Robert E. Jackson, and ways met by his wife.

Body Identified After 'Drowned' Man Shows Up

Police had "final" proof yesterday of the much-disputed identity of a man whose body was found in the Potomac River Wednesday.

Richard Barrow, former Arlington, Va., cab driver, who first was believed the drowning victim, showed up late Thursday night at his home, 2856 Wilson blvd., police reported. He said he had spent the past few days with friends at North Beach, Md., and first learned about his reputed death on arrival in D. C.

Also back in town and elated about Richard's return were Charles Barrow, a brother, who identified the body in the morgue as that of Richard, and their father, Harry Barrow. The two returned from Inwood, W. Va., where they had gone to make funeral arrangements, after being notified of the error in identity by police.

Meantime, Carl Vernon Cecil, 33, former filling station attendant, who was established as the dead man after a fingerprint check, still lay unclaimed in the District Morgue. Police said they had notified his mother in Bluff City, Tenn.

Franklin Park Religious Forums

Two religious forums will be held in Franklin Park, 14th and K sts. nw., tomorrow by the Washington Catholic Evidence Guild.

The first meeting from 3 to 5 p. m. will have Edward J. Hefforn as chairman. Joseph Woods will speak on "Apostolicity," Miss Alice Hill on "The Mass," and Clemens J. Poiesz on "Indifference."

The evening forum from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock will be under the direction of the Rev. William H. Russell of Catholic University. He will be assisted by the Rev. Joseph L. Lilly, C.M., and V. E. Smith.

A question and answer period wil follow the addresses.

Young Adults Plan Services Tomorrow

Young adults of the Calvary Methodist Church, 1459 Columbia rd. nw., will conduct services tomorrow at 8 p. m. Mrs William L. Clarke, president of the Calvary Woman's Society of Christian Service, will be the speaker.

The weekly church picnic will be held in Rock Creek Park Tuesday. The group will leave the church at 6:30 p. m.

Congressional 'Streamlining' Bill Is Signed

By the Associated Press

President Truman signed the bill to modernize Congress yesterday, praised it as a "significant advance," and suggested further moves in the same direction.

In a formal statement the President incated particular pleasure over a section of the new law boosting the pay of Representatives and Senators from $10,000 to $12,500 a year plus a tax-free $2500 expense allowance. He called that "a long overdue step in providing adequate compensation."

Highlights of Bill

Principal provisions of the measure, in addition to the pay raise:

1. Cut the number of Senate committees from 33 to 15 and House committees from 48 to 19.

2. Provide more time at home for Congressmen through adjournment each year at least from August 1 to January 1.

3. Require lobbyists to register their names, employers and expenses for a check by Congress.

4. Relieve Congress of handling minor claims, peension and local bills by giving Federal agencies broader authority.

5. Require four major committees—House Ways and Means and Appropriations, and Senate Finance and Appropriations—to meet at the start of each Congress and recommend a Federal budget for the coming year.

6. Make Congressmen eligible for the Government's contributory pension system.

Mr. Truman in his statement praised the provision for the joint meeting of the taxing and spending committees as promising "clearer and more realistic relationships" between the income and expenditures sides of the budget.

Sees Improved Relations

He said the general provisions of the measure should promote "easier and closer relations" between the legislative and executive branches of Government.

The President said the new act was one of the greatest steps forward since Congress was organized but expressed the hope that the legislators would continue to give attention to unsolved portions of the reorganization problem.

Mr. Truman signed the bill in the presence of interested Senators and House members, including the two principal sponsors, Senator LaFollette (Prog., Wisc.) and Representative Monroney (D., Okla.). Those two headed up a special Senate-House Committee which worked nearly two years on the problem before turning out the bill which, with some amendments, became law yesterday.

Amputee-Car Bill Formally Passes House

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The House, with but a single objection, yesterday formally approved expenditude of 90 million dollars to buy autos for war-maimed GIs who'll never be able to walk normally again.

The Senate unanimously reconfirmed its action of Thursday in moving to provide free cars for an estimated 20,000 leg-amputees, paraplegics (spinal paralysis cases) and other veterans who've lost the power of locomotion.

In its final form, the legislation limits to $1600 the price of the specially-fitted cars. To be eligible, the GI must have an honorable discharge, and have lost a lower limb, or the use of a lower limb, or both limbs, at or above the ankle.

Whittington Against Measure

Representative William M. Whittington (D., Miss.), whose lone objection last week prevented the amputee car bill from getting on the House floor for a vote under unanimous consent rules, opposed the measure again yesterday.

Whittington urged that the measure be deferred for further consideration. He charged the legislation was discriminatory in that it made no provision for other types of disabled veterans.

Rankin Prefers Cash Gift

A Mississippi colleague, Representative John Rankin, chairman of the House eVterans Committee, said that he would prefer an "adjustment allowance" of $1500 to all severely disabled veterans, but that he would vote for the auto provision.

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.), who led the fight for the amputee-car bill, told a group of arm amputees that she would renew her efforts to obtain free autos for them, too, at the next meeting of Congress.

Passage of the measure was the result of an eleventh-hour maneuver by Senator Warren G. Magnuson (D., Wash.), who tacked the 30-million-dollar proposal on to this Congress' final appropriation bill Friday.

New Rule for Fair

Frederick, Md., Aug. 2 (AP).—The Frederick County Agricultural Society announces that at the Frederick Fair, October 1 to 5, exhibitors' tickets will not be required for any entries except poultry. A prize list of about $900 has been set up for the horse and pony show.

Record Output of 26 Million Suits Predicted for This Year

The Civilian Production Administration yesterday predicted a record output of 26 million men's suits this year.

CPA Administrator John D. Small based this forecast on production of nearly 12 million suits during the first half of 1946. He said this was almost as many suits as were produced during all of 1945.

Output during the first six months of 1946, Small reported included 10,900,000 men's wool suits, 500,000 students' wool suits, and 500,000 men's cotton and rayon suits.

"Barring unforseen difficulties," Small said, "production of men's and students' wool suits should be close to 25 million for 1946. Cotton and rayon suits will probably add up to another million or a total of approximately 93 per cent of the goal which CPA set at the beginning of the year."

The previous record output was about 24,000,000 before the war, OPA said.

Meanwhile, OPA and the Office of Price Administration announced a revised program designed to encourage production of linings for men's and boys' suits, coats and jackets.

The plan provides for a 10 per cent incentive price increase on individual manufacturer's total output of certain types of rayon linings, provided specified production goals are achieved.

Under a previous program put into effect last February, the 10 per cent price increase applied only on production in excess of output during the July-September quarter of 1945.

Bus Catastrophe

The horrifying crash of a crowded suburban bus off the Memorial Bridge Friday morning was a stark reminder of the frailty of the ever-present human factor in automobile accidents. This smashup, in which 44 persons were injured, apparently cannot be ascribed to mechanical failure. Someone's inattention or error in judgment was responsible for a collision which sent the bus careening helplessly through a guard rail to somersault onto the roadway below. Witnesses have stated that the bus driver did all in his power to avert the catastrophe, and police are reported planning to charge the driver of the other car with reckless driving. Meanwhile the remarkable thing is that anyone got out alive. Undoubtedly the prompt and intelligent first aid rendered victims by servicemen and other passersby contributed in reducing the toll. The relative ease with which the bridge railing was snapped incidentally raises the question whether in future designing it might be better to give structural strength preference over architectural beauty.

As if by way of furnishing a grim exclamation point, this accident follows by only a few days an alarming report on 1946 traffic deaths by the National Safety Council. An increase of 40 per cent in fatalities was recorded for the first six months of 1946 over the comparable period of 1945. A total of 15,750 Americans died in automobile crashes from January 1 to June 30 this year. The one encouraging thing in the Safety Council report is the fact that spring months showed a slight decline in auto deaths. "There is definite evidence," the council says, "that the Nation is beginning to sober up a little from the traffic spree it has been on ever since VJ-Day." Figures in the District of Columbia happily reflect this sobering-up trend. Up to yesterday Washington had had 35 traffic fatalities during 1946 as opposed to 50 for the same period last year. But, viewed in the light of the safety authorities' contention that all accidents are preventable, even this total is scandalously high.

All this is a strong argument for intensifying our already widespread safety campaigns. Except for focusing attention on the need for constant awareness, probably not a great deal can be done to lessen the danger of human aberrations in a given situation. And in public transportation such as buses the lives of many will continue to be entrusted to the proficiency of a few. But rigid enforcement of mechanical inspections, speed laws, drivers' tests and comparable safety precautions can do a great deal to reduce the scope in which the human factor operates in accidents. Americans who have been rightfully concerned over the number of war casualties often have exhibited a frightening callousness toward destruction of human life at home. Friday's near-massacre is a vivid illustration of the fact that an automobile, too, can be a lethal weapon.

Dr. Nourse's Job

The principal function of the Council of Economic Advisers created under the popularly called Full Employment Act passed last winter is to gather information concerning economic trends, appraise the value of Government programs in opening up employment opportunities, and develop and recommend to the President national economic policies that would promote free competitive enterprise, avoid or diminish the effect of economic fluctuations, and maintain employment, production and purchasing power. Thus it will be seen that the council is primarily a fact-finding and advisory body whose usefulness will depend to a large extent upon the caliber of the men composing it.

The President is especially fortunate in having obtained the services of Edwin G. Nourse, vice president of the Brookings Institution, as chairman of the council. During his long and distinguished career as an agricultural economist and a general research worker, Dr. Nourse has combined scholarly, painstaking analysis of facts with sound and balanced judgments concerning matters of policy. Thus he is admirably equipped to direct the work of the new council and attract public support for its recommendations by steering clear of half-baked proposals and impracticable short cuts to an economic millennium.

President Truman deserves a vote of thanks for having made all his appointments to the council on the basis of merit. The pressure to award these high-paid jobs to the politically deserving was undoubtedly great. Had the President yielded to that pressure, the hope of making any substantial progress toward the goal of full employment by the research route would have gone glimmering.

Atom Sovereignty

The Soviet member of the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission, Mr. Andrei Gromyko, has missed, or evaded, the whole point; we think, of the American proposal for atomic control. He inveighs against the proposal on the ground, as he said Wednesday, that "this idea of inspection of atomic energy is greatly exaggerated in importance. It is a too superficial understanding of the problem of control." Precisely the same point was recognized as long ago as last March in the report of the Lilienthal committee to Secretary Byrnes. "We have concluded unanimously," this report stated, "that there is no prospect of security against atomic warfare in a system of international agreements to outlaw such weapons controlled only by a system which relies on inspection and similar police-like methods. . . . We have been concerned with discovering what other measures are required in order that inspection might be so limited and so simplified that it would be practical and could aid in accomplishing the purposes of security."

It is in the "other measures," not in inspection, that the heart of the American proposal is to be found. And the keystone among these is the socialization of all the materials and means of atomic production. It is an extraordinary paradox that this proposal for outright socialization should have come from the earth's greatest citadel of capitalism, while from the motherland of socialism comes only horrified repugnance to the idea and a stubborn insistence upon private, or at least national, ownership. In the United States we have just enacted a domestic atom control law which socializes the ownership of all fissionable material, all instruments of atomic production and even all patents in the atomic field. There should be, therefore, no doubt of our sincerity in proposing international socialization. The proposal stems from no doctrinaire devotion to a socialist ideal but from a considered conviction that private or national ownership of so dangerous a substance would make effective control impossible.

One would expect Mr. Gromyko to accept this view readily. Instead, he has ignored it. Had he chosen to consider inspection as an adjunct to a system of communal world ownership of atomic energy, he would have seen it in perspective. There can be no rational objection to inspection if there is no private or national ownership in the atomic field. For then inspection does not infringe upon individual or national rights and can be devoted to the relatively simple task of determining that the common world ownership remains unimpaired. In this context, it is at once necessary and effectual.

It appears to be Mr. Gromyko's view, however, that what was good enough in international relations for the czars is good enough for the Soviets, that Nineteenth Century sovereignty is good enough for the atomic age. This anachronistic faith is based, no doubt, upon a shrewd certainty that the United States will not use the weapon of which it has at present exclusive possession—at least until other nations become possessors of it and threaten to use it too. And perhaps he figures that when that day comes he will be able to drive a better bargain. If this is the case, there is nothing we can do about it save to rely upon our own strength and insist upon our own sovereignty. We have made a candid and indeed a generous offer to relinquish sovereignty in exchange for world authority. We cannot relinquish it for anything less.

Student Exchange

One of the praiseworthy accomplishments of the Seventy-ninth Congress is the boost it gave to the interchange of students on a world scale in the passage of the Fulbright bill on disposal of surplus property abroad. This bill provides that funds derived from sale of surplus American war goods in foreign countries may be used to establish an exchange of students between the United States and the countries concerned. Naturally, we are more than a little gratified by passage of the Fulbright bill, because the procedure now established follows closely the line suggested in a Post editorial last September. It came to fruition as a result of the sympathy and persistence of Senator Fulbright.

What has been achieved is a worthy companion to the highly successful scholarship system for Chinese students inaugurated by the United States with its share of indemnities from the Boxer Rebellion. Under the present plan, one million dollars a year up to a total of 20 million dollars may be spent for educational exchanges with each country buying surplus property. These funds may be used to finance courses for American students in foreign universities, to subsidize American professors lecturing in institutions abroad, to permit foreign students to attend American schools in other countries, and to pay the transportation of foreign students who wish to study in the United States. A 10-man board of foreign scholarships is set up to select candidates and to administer the program in conjunction with the State Department. Veterans are to be given preference in selection for foreign study.

The benefits inherent in the program are as obvious as they are significant. First, the United States is providing a way for foreign countries to pay for American surplus property in their own currencies without using scarce dollars. Second, we shall be obtaining measurable returns for property which in many cases is not worth returning to this country and now is a drug on us. We shall save considerable manpower now required to care for this property. Third and most important, in furthering the exchange of first-hand knowledge between the United States and other peoples, we shall be helping to break down the barriers of ignorance and suspicion.

Although facilities in most instances will not be available before 1947, the fact that this plan is in the making will be a salutary influence in our relations with other countries. It is encouraging that the State Department already is conducting negotiations with a score or more nations to place the exchange program in operation. Assistant Secretary of State Benton estimates that as many as 100,000 Americans and 50,000 foreign students will take advantage of this opportunity in the next three decades. This is truly a monumental goal which cannot help but leave its imprint on the kind of world society we are to live in.

Riot At The Polls

The ugly explosion of violence at the polls in McMinn County, Tenn., on Thursday had a background of repression and tyranny which were its direct causes. The so-called GI Nonpartisan League, which waged a brief but bloody civil war against county officials, was engaged in a crusade to break the control over the county long exercised by the Cantrell Democratic organization. Representative John Jennings, jr., of Tennessee testified to the provocation behind their crusade in a speech in the House on July 13. "For the past 10 years," he declared, "the citizens of McMinn County, Tenn., have been denied the right to vote and have their votes counted as cast. Elections in that county have been conducted by armed deputy sheriffs and policemen." He charged that ballot boxes were stuffed, ballots miscounted and Republican election judges forced at gun-point "to stand back 10 feet while the Democratic officer called Republican ballots in favor of Democratic candidates."

It was in the light of this experience that the GIs who had mobilized themselves for political action watched the county deputies pack up the ballot boxes and take them to the jail house. It was in this atmosphere that they saw several of their own election officials beaten by the deputies and three of their friends taken to jail as hostages. It is not easy to condone violence, even when it is so provoked. It is easy enough to understand it, however, in a part of the country where it is traditional and in a situation where peaceful means appeared to be of no avail.

The violence itself was tragic, the excesses which developed out of it shameful. They impose a blot upon our pretensions to political maturity and upon the democratic processes in which this Nation takes such pride. But it is to be distinguished, we believe, from the wanton and brutal sort of mob action which took place recently at Columbia, Tenn., and from the sadistic lynchings in Georgia and Mississippi. The passion that inflamed the war veterans in McMinn County was a passion for liberty. And in this their reaction was not markedly different from that which led to the American Revolutionary War. They could not accept oppression supinely.

Mitchell's Memory

The last-minute decision of Congress to award Gen. William L. Mitchell the Congressional Medal of Honor posthumously may assuage those members of Congress who have the shelving of the Army-Navy merger plan on their conscience. But it will do nothing to comfort the unquiet spirit of Billy Mitchell. This belated recognition of his gallantry and his vision, to be sure, does honor to a great American, but the award should return our minds to the things that Mitchell struggled against. They still require our zeal. The man who fought for a separate air force as the prelude to a single department of national defense, who foresaw the tragedy of Pearl Harbor as the result of lack of service coordination, who struggled with red tape and brasshatism all his life—this man can best be remembered, not by posthumous honors, but by seeing to it that the inertia toward change and the jealousy of initiative do not imperil the national security.

To be sure, the individual must submit himself both to discipline and the common good, but we shall never have a defense system always on its toes if individual enterprise is frowned upon. Yet this is the general complaint. If a Regular Army officer manages to keep a perfectly blank record, if a naval officer concentrates on apple polishing—he is the man most likely to succeed. In the postwar establishment, there must be greater opportunity for precisely the qualities that do not pay in the armed services. If this is done, then we can say we have expiated any wrong we have done to Billy Mitchell, and we will have given his memory a more precious monument than our highest decoration.

LETTER

I hunt with endless radio.
I dare not make the voices still,
for one may mention, as at will,
the streets and buildings where you go.

I search with journals. One may find a word, a name, where interests meet, whose syllables may trap the fleet pond-skimmer of the restless mind.

In theaters, I watch the pose for gestures I have sometime known and in false words track down the tone that brings all mumming to a close.

But when your letter bites my hand, that hunter's training, balked by prey,
flees down the wind. Alone, at bay, blind, weak, unpivoted I stand.

Department Of Welfare

A "welfare lag" today confronts the Nation, and if a central governmental body is not organized, the United States will be faced with a social dilemma greater than any ever experienced in past or present history.

The bureaucratic ideals of private welfare agencies hamper the development of a practical central authority. A United States Department of Welfare for the "needy" of our Nation is imperative. Not only is such a department needed, but its services should be made known so that when a disabled citizen is in dire need of assistance, he will know with whom he may discuss his problem. The disabled war veteran has been oriented on the availability of rehabilitation work, but the civilian wanders blindly for such aid. Advantage of prevailing rehabilitation work is not being taken because the fact of such aid is not known. The one spark of enthusiasm in the field of social welfare is left to dwindle. Why not illuminate it?

The need for a United States Department of Welfare is recognized by a minority of latitudinarians. Those of us who firmly believe in the creation of a centralized, clearing-house authority under whose jurisdiction and leadership will fall all local and county welfare agencies, must not falter or flinch in thought, deed or word until the ultimate goal is reached.

One of life's Christian purposes is to minister. Today, more than ever before in America, we need the assistance of legislature in order that these United States may be of service to those who need help.

Events In Bolivia

Sumner Welles' column of July 31 on Bolivia deserves careful and extensive examination. Mr. Welles makes the extraordinary revelation that the Department of State "demanded" that the other American governments withhold recognition of the Villarroel regime. This is the first highly authoritative description of the process of "consultation" which has now become standard diplomatic practice in the Western Hemisphere.

No excuse can be made for political crimes, suppression of the freedom of the press or the destruction of civil liberties. If the Villarroel regime was guilty of these practices, then by judicial procedure its responsibility should have been determined, and the damage to American democracy and continental solidarity assessed and penalized.

But Welles' assertion that Villarroel had converted Bolivia into "an immense concentration camp" is a flat misstatement. I spent one month in Bolivia early this year. During that time I spoke to over 50 of the most bitter opposition leaders in La Paz, Cochabamba, Cruro and Potosi. I question Mr. Welles' right to make such a sweeping generalization.

Mr. Welles wsa Undersecretary of State when the President of Bolivia signed legislation which came very close to establishing forced labor in the mines. Mr. Welles is not on record as having protested or moved his considerable influence to restore to the Bolivian workers their civil rights. On the contrary, this Government invited General Penaranda, an accessory to the killing of more than 19 tin miners at Catavi in December, 1942, to visit the United States.

To this date there has been no official reference anywhere to the Catavi massacre. There is in Washington, in and out of official circles, an atmosphere of restrained satisfaction that Villarroel was lynched. Not even Mr. Welles, whose public conduct is always correct, has expressed disapproval of this sort of crime. He, and those that share his views on recent Bolivian events, have, however, most emphatically and rightly deplored the deaths of political opponents of Villarroel, some of whom died in the act of carrying arms against his government. Is there a devotion to principle in this discriminating selection of the crimes for which Mr. Welles chooses to mourn?

Antilynching Law

Just about the time the South appears to be coming out of the doldrums, in which it has been sunk ever since the War Between the States, something like Bilbo or Talmadge happens to it. When these things happen, for every forward step the South has taken, it takes six steps backward into the Dark Ages.

As a white Southerner I am usually proud of my heritage. Today I can feel nothing but shame.

The State and city minions of Southern law are not going to do anything about punishing the white murderer of a black man or woman. Without their cooperation the Federal men will only run into a dark wall of silence, for when lynch rule holds sway the password is "silence." The answer to all questions is, "Mister, I don't know what from nothing and if I did I ain't likely to do any talking."

It may be too much to hope for, but one can only pray that the President will make possible Federal legislation designed to put a stop to the racial atrocities which are now taking place in the South. Only Federal laws, and Federal laws with teeth in them, can procure justice when a white man slays his black brother in the deep South, where, if one accepts the evidence forced on him, deep ignorance of decency still prevails. Franklin D. Roosevelt would have done something about it—and done it fast. ELISABET M. STONE.

Southern Solution

I believe Mr. Julius W. Robertson was correct in his letter of July 29 when he stated that the Federal Government will most effectively handle the Negro political situation in the South by "intelligent social legislation and by generally aiding education."

The so-called Northern factor have far too long preached to their Southern brothers the story of "treat your brother better" and offered no solution to the question as to how to do this. Southerners believe in brotherly love as well as anyone else.

However, the problem cannot be handled by cut-and-dry legislation alone. If many people had lived in cities where one fifth of the entire population were Negro, they would stop and think on the situation.

The solution will come only when socially the Negro has scattered himself throughout the United States to such an extent that his characteristics, sometimes disagreeable to the white brother, will be so diffused that he will be in such small numbers in the community that he can be educated without resentfulness, and therefore become no problem at all.

It is not only a social and legislative problem for the South alone but for others too, who know too little about the actual situation that exists to give advice to their Southern friends.

Mr. North's Reviews

It is thrilling to watch with what devotion your book reviewer, Sterling North, hugs the Communist Party line; how he denounces the book of William C. Minimizing Pressure Influence

The average citizen believes that American democracy is the best form of government. He also believes, however, that it is not now functioning successfully, and he wonders why.

Mr. Marquis Childs, one of our best commentators, and a very useful citizen, recently suggested in his column in The Post that possibly Congress was not sufficiently responsive to public opinion and that the adoption of the English practice of more frequent and timely general elections might be desirable. I agree with the implication of Mr. Childs' article that public opinion, properly defined, should control congressional action, but I fear that his cure for our present ills would only aggravate the disease.

For many years Congress has evidenced a tendency to misinterpret the insistent demands of minority pressure groups as an expression of American public opinion, and to act accordingly. Never was this tendency so marked as at the present time. As a result, the democratic process is seriously impaired and the public suffers.

This evil requires a remedy, however drastic it may be. There is responsible public sentiment, which seems to be growing, for the following change in our present system. Senators and Representatives to be elected for single terms and to be ineligible for reelection at any time thereafter, or, at least, for some years; these single terms to be longer than the present terms; congressional salaries to be substantially increased, and reasonable pensions to be paid on retirement. The proposal would exempt all present Congressmen from the rule eliminating reelections. This would have obvious advantages. No Congressman now in office would thereby be barred from a political career already being pursued. There would be a more gradual transition to the new system. With this feature, but hardly without it, the proposal might be within the realm of possible realization.

Such a change would largely eliminate the reelection motive, which is a powerful deterrent to effective congressional action for the public good. This motive, however natural and proper in itself, is often so strong as to be controlling, for some Congressmen, usually enough to affect a vote, seem to think of little else, especially in an election year.

I have no criticism of Congressmen as such. On the contrary I am convinced that the average Congressman is, without doubt, well above the average citizen in ability, intellectual honesty, moral courage and conscientious devotion to duty, and that the common American concept to the contrary is entirely unjustified. No Congressman, however, can be wholly insensitive to increasing pressures from determined minorities with a single and well defined objective.

Minority groups seldom represent the American people as a whole and often do not even represent a majority of a Congressman's constituents. Under our present system, therefore, in acting upon important issues, Congress is not responsive to public opinion, and often acts entirely contrary to the wishes and needs of the American people as a whole.

It is quite obvious that there are objections to such an innovation as I have suggested. As with so many other basic issues now before the American people, however, the question is not whether it would be a good thing in the abstract, but solely whether it is preferable to something else, in this case, possibly a serious breakdown in our democratic machinery. Some change is certainly desirable. The above proposal may have some merit. At least, it may be worthy of consideration and discussion.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Presidential Want Ad

ONCE AGAIN President Truman is having trouble finding the right man for the right job. This time the jobs are super-super and the men named must be of the highest capacity and integrity, for they will control the greatest force in the world.

Originally, the President had hope to be able to name the five members of the newly created Atomic Energy Commission before Congress adjourned. He had hoped to have them confirmed before the Senate departed for the long recess.

Now, unless Congress is delayed by a last-minute snarl, they will have to be interim appointments, subject to confirmation when the Senate returns. That is unfortunate because of the far-reaching importance of this commission. While apparently it was impossible, it would have been highly desirable if the new commission could have started off with the blessing of the Congress that created it.

The White House has sifted a great number of names coming from many sources. One of those considered early as a member of the commission, and perhaps even as chairman, was David Lilienthal of the Tennessee Valley Authority. Lilienthal was chairman of the State Department committee that drafted the report first proposing an international Atomic Development Authority.

SOON, HOWEVER, Lilienthal's name was eliminated. The first reason was that it would be difficult or impossible to find anyone with Lilienthal's background, capacity and zeal to take the chairmanship of TVA. Another and somewhat more political reason also entered.

One of Lilienthal's most vociferous enemies is Senator Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee. It was not that McKellar would have opposed his confirmation as an atomic commissioner. The veteran Tennesseean, who just won the Democratic primary for reelection at the age of 77, would have leaped at that opportunity like a trout to the fly.

His next step would have been to demand the right to name Lilienthal's successor on TVA. McKellar, whose record as a patronage seeker is unrivaled, has always taken the attitude that TVA is local patronage, on a par with postmasterships, and therefore to be dealt out to the deserving. Lilienthal has insisted on keeping TVA on a nonpartisan, merit basis. No crystal-gazing is required to see what a McKellar man would do in the TVA job.

These persistent political angles are to be found every time the problem of filling an important job comes up. This was one reason for the long delay in naming the Full Employment Board.

The President originally asked Undersecretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman to be chairman of that board. Chapman believed a businessman should be one of the three members. But at the same time Senator Robert Wagner of New York was insisting that Leon Keyserling be given one of the three places. This compelled the President to recast his plans entirely. The chairmanship finally went to Edwin G. Nourse, a distinguished economist of the Brookings Institution, with Keyserling as one of the other two members.

ONE OF THE real dangers in appointing the atomic commissioners, particularly since the appointments will be interim, is that they may fall to eminently respectable stuffed shirts. The name of one individual in that category is rumored for the chairmanship.

If this happens, it will be a tragedy. The jobs are too big for that, too vital. The eminent stuffed shirts have an advantage, of course, in that they usually have private means to help eke out Government salaries. They are long on cash, and eager for honor.

The new commission will be made up of a chairman and four members. The chairman's salary is $17,500; the members' $15,000. They will have their headquarters in Washington.

That seems an adequate salary. But by the time a man moves here, finds a house in still overcrowded Washington, and begins to maintain the official position which such an appointment calls for, $15,000 does not look so large. Income taxes take a generous slice. What is more, any man with the capacity and background for such a job would be likely to be in a much higher income bracket. The initial appointments are for two years.

Maybe a want ad would help the President. Wanted—a man with bigness of mind, bigness of spirit and imagination; able to take part in controlling the stuff the universe is made of; apply to the White House.

Terminal Leave Pay

When officers received their terminal leave pay it was regarded as salary legitimately due them, just as salary will be due to Congressmen during their five-month furlough this year.

When applied to enlisted men, however, Senator Taft calls terminal leave pay "a handout"; and The Post worries out loud because so much money suddenly released for the purchase of already scarce commodities might cause inflation.

Senator Taft's designation of "a handout" comes in bad taste from any member of Congress which permitted the wholesale robbery of the American Treasury now being uncovered by the Mead Committee; a Congress that paid no heed to the warnings from the Comptroller General and others.

Gromyko's Argument

By Ernest Lindley

Soviet Atom Plan No Guarantee

Lindley

IN HIS argument against international control of atomic energy, Andrei Gromyko, the Soviet delegate, said that "no inspection as such can guarantee peace and security."

This assertion is correct. It could be expanded. Neither inspection nor anything else can guarantee peace and security. The peace can be breached by any nation which is ready to shoulder the risks of breaching it. It can be breached with less risk by a great, strongly armed power than by a small weak nation. It is reasonable to assume that no nation will launch an offensive war unless it feels confident of winning it. Its appraisal may be wrong—as Hitler's was. But there is no way of guaranteeing that in the future a nation, or a group of nations, will not start another war.

The plan for international control of atomic energy proposed by the United States does not pretend to guarantee peace and security. If adopted, it would help to bind the peace and would promote a sense of security among the peoples of the world. Its successful operation might also encourage the nations of the world to take further steps toward binding the peace and make all peoples feel more secure against attack.

THE CONCRETE purpose of the American plan is not, however, to guarantee peace and security. It is to provide reasonable assurance that no nation or group of individuals will be able to make a surprise attack with atomic weapons. Under the American plan, it would be very difficult, if not wholly impracticable, for any nation or group of men to make large-scale secret preparations to wage atomic warfare. Such ppreparations would be detected. Other nations would have warning. They would have a chance to take preventive measures or to arm themselves with atomic weapons.

Without means of detecting preparations for atomic warfare, nobody could fell secure. Every nation would feel exposed to the danger of crippling—perhaps annihilating—attack without warning. The German plane-tank team which blitzed through so much of Europe was a toy compared to atomic weapons. If Hitler had had the atomic bomb, he almost certainly would rule the world today.

EFFECTIVE international control of atomic energy cannot guarantee peace. But it can go a long way toward making it impossible for a nation or group of people to win a war in an afternoon or to impose their will on the world by the threat of atomic bombing. It can give peace-loving nations some asurance that they will have at least a chance to fight for their lives. And this would be a deterrent to aggression.

Detection, through international inspectors, is the core of the American plan—or of any plan which offers any alternative to an atomic arms race. For various reasons, which seem sound, American experts who have studied the problem have concluded that mere inspection will not assure detection unless the principal raw materials sources and facilities for concentrating fissionable materials are placed in the hands of an international agency.

If the Russians close the door on inspection by an international agency they close the door on international control of atomic energy. The result will be an atomic arms race.

There may still be a crack in the door. From the beginning Gromyko has referred to possible safeguards surrounding his proposal to outlaw atomic weapons. Other members of the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission have been pressing Gromyko to explain what it means. If he has anything constructive in mind, the sooner he presents it, the better. For he has progressively deepened suspicions as to the ultimate intentions of the rulers of the Soviet Union.

Soldier Saved From Ledge at Niagara Falls

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 2 (INS).—William "Red" Hill, daredevil of several exploits at Niagara Falls, became a hero again today when he saved a Canadian soldier clinging to a slippery ledge 150 feet above the falls.

Hill was lowered by a rope from an aerial fire ladder to reach Sgt. Major Eric H. Latham, 29, of Hamilton, Ont., who had fallen 40 feet from a grassy embankment after climbing over a wall.

Latham had been on the ledge during a night-long rainstorm and was unconscious part of the time.

Dr. J. H. Davidson of Niagara Falls, Ont., was lowered on another rope suspended from the fire truck to direct Hill in first aid measures before Latham was hauled up.

Latham was taken to the Niagara Falls, Ont., hospital with possible fractures of the right knee and ankle, and chest and internal injuries.

He was losing his grip on the wet grass and weeds and was about to slip over the brink of the gorge when Hill reached him.

"Keep me away from the edge!" he screamed as Hill was slowly and gingerly lowered.

Latham's cries were not heard from the time he fell at 11 o'clock last night until two tourists crossed the bridge from the American side this morning.

They notified Bridge Inspector Hugh C. Swain, who said "the little ledge where he luckily landed is rectangular in shape and not much to cling to."

Suits Attack Georgia's Unit Primary Plan

Brunswick, Ga., Aug. 2 (AP).—A suit was filed in Federal District Court here today attacking the constitutionality of Georgia's county unit primary election system and seeking to block the nomination of Eugene Talmadge for his fourth term as Governor.

Talmadge won the nomination under the county unit system in a July 17 primary. He received a majority of the county unit votes, but in the popular vote trailed young James V. Carmichael who had the blessing of Governor Ellis Arnall.

Nomination in the Democratic Primary is tantamount to election in one party Georgia.

Suit Filed for Women

The suit, filed by Charles S. Reid, former chief justice of the Georgia Supreme Court, and John L. Tye, jr., Atlanta attorney, was on behalf of Mrs. Robert Lee Turman of Fulton County, and Cullen B. Gosnell of DeKalb County.

The suit contended that the Georgia primary law, which provieds for the county unit system of nominating State officials, was in conflict with the 14th amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

It asked that Secretary of State Ben Fortson, Chairman Lon Duckworth of the State Democratic executive committee, and Miss Grace Cannington, secretary of the committee, be enjoined from certifying the nominees in the recent primary.

Student Takes Action

A companion suit was filed by Alex W. Smith, Atlanta attorney and former president of the State Bar Association, on behalf of Earl P. Cook, a Georgia Tech student, seeking to have the recent Fifth congressional district race declared unconstitutional.

In this race, Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin, the incumbent, received the popular majority, but Judge James C. Davis carried the county units. Both candidates will appear on the general election ballot in November.

Judge Frank M. Scarlett denied injunctions in both suits, but issued a rule nisi requiring the defendants to appear before a three-judge Federal Court in Atlanta at 10 a. m., August 16.

Supplier Strikes Cut Auto Output

Detroit, Aug. 2 (AP).—Ward's Automotive Reports said today that because of strikes in parts manufacturing plants, cutting off supplies, car and truck production in the United States and Canada this week dropped to 78,190 units. This week's volume compares with a revised total of 84,720 last week; 18,690 in the like week a year ago and 62,146 in the corresponding week of 1941.

Settlement last night of a strike in the toleo dura division of the Detroit Harvester Co. is expected to bring the Studebaker and Hudson assembly lines back into production early next week.

Athens Rioting Ends, Deputies Released, City Without Law

Athens, Tenn., Aug. 2 (U.P.).—This was a town without law when dawn slid through the morning haze today.

It was a town in the whimsied control of a mob. A scowling mob—but friendly to its friends. Twenty-five special deputies were imprisoned in the shattered jail, guarded by earnest young men with rifles and their elders with pistols.

The sheriff, Pat Mansfield, could not be found. Paul Cantrell, "organization" candidate for sheriff in the bloody local election that touched off mass rioting last night, was gone too. Governor Jim McCord had called out the State Militia. But at 7:30 a. m. (C.S.T.) there were no militiamen in sight.

Cooler heads prevailed this morning. The imprisoned deputies, who were beaten and slugged earlier today by angry sympathizers with the "GI Republican-Coalition" ticket, were treated kindly. Someone sent out for breakfast for the jailed deputies.

Ed Robinson, one of the imprisoned deputies, was led safely through the scowling but inactive mob, to the hospital. He was bleeding profusely from a bullet wound in the side.

Jail a Shambles

The jail was a shambles of blood, broken glass, falling plaster and splintered wood. Four charges of dynamite wrecked the front of the one and one-half story brick building.

It was the dynamite that brought the surrender of the embattled deputies. They released the 30-or-so "GI" sympathizers they had locked up in the jail. Then they discarded their weapons, and marched out, hands overhead. The mob fell on them, knocked several to the pavement, slugged them.

"Windy" Wyatt got it, perhaps, the worst. "Windy" is well known around town. He works at a pool hall. He was active at the polls yesterday—against the GIs. He was armed at the polls. When the shooting began, he turned out to be a deputy. Today he was bruised and bloody.

Local leaders say most of the 25 deputies were out-of-towners. Many of the prisoners admitted it.

The jailers' quarters on the second floor of the building were wrecked. Fresh, red blood stained the floor. I counted 10 empty or half-empty whiskey bottles. The furniture was wrecked. The walls were pocked with bullet marks from slugs of the mob's tommy-guns and rifles and pistols.

Ballot Boxes Guarded

In one of the cells the GIs stood guard over two ballot boxes, and two voters lists. It was here, they charged, that the county machine was attempting to "count them out." They claimed that guarded cell contains the evidence.

The mob was still there today, but it wa sa curious mob now. It was men and women and their families. They thronged the square, but there was not hostility—just mutterings and silent scowling.

No one knows who, officially, won the local election that started it all.

The "GI ticket" claims it has won a concession of defeat from the organization of Cantrell and Burch Briggs, who have dominated the county's politics for 10 years. Briggs is sergeant at arms of the Tennessee House of Representatives. In the only two boxes tabulated before the trouble began, the GIs were leading by a two to one margin.

As daylight came over the embattled town, the streets were quiet except for the milling throng in front of the jail. Communications were disrupted. Many wires were shot down by the sporadic firing. The United Press teletaye to the Daily Post-Athenian was inoperative. Its circuit had been cut.

A dozen automobiles were smashed and overturned in front of the jail. That was at the height of the mob's frenzy. Most of the overturned cars bore out-of-county licenses.

The armed GIs—the town's only "law" for the moment—said they all were cars of the small army of "special deputies" sworn in by Sheriff Mansfield to "enforce order" at the polls.

The crowd was shifting uneasily as the morning came on. They half hoped, half feared the militia would come. Most wondered what was holding up "the troops."

W. E. Grubb was in charge of the jail, a pistol on his hip. "I wish I knew who was the law around here," he told me. "There isn't any law right now. The militia's supposed to be on the way. We're trying to keep things under control."

The town was strangely devoid of Negroes. They just weren't to be seen.

Lincoln Citizens Sponsor Church School Movement

"A Back-to-Sunday-School Movement" designed to combat juvenile delinquency is being sponsored by the Lincoln Civic Association.

Under the direction of its president, E. F. Harris, and of the general chairman of the project, Benjamin H. Miller, the association has formed a conference of superintendents of the nine Sunday Schools in the area from 17th st. nw. to Rock Creek and P st. nw. to the Potomac River.

Block chairmen named by the association are now canvassing homes to see that all children are enrolled in the Sunday School of their parents' choice.

A trophy donated by the association will be presented to the school showing the greatest increase in enrollment from July 1 to September 30. Within each Sunday school a "Clean Mouth Club" will be formed.

The association also is encouraging junior high school age children to form bands and glee clubs, with the association furnishing teachers, music and instruments.

'Night and Day' Hits Technical Perfection —Set to Good Music

IN MAKING "Night and Day" the piece de resistance of their celebration of the twentieth anniversary of sound, the Warner Brothers must be credited with a hit and charged with practically no errors.

When production of the Technicolor musical based on the life of Cole Porter came up, Burbank very obviously determined to throw the book, the spectrum, all the octaves and the best talent available, into it.

Ginny Simms

The result, all 132 minutes of it as previewed yesterday, is on the gargantuan side. It is mammoth in cast, physical dimensions, musical values and as a monumental example of the progress two decades have made in the science of sound recording.

A fellow Hoosier who doesn't know too much about the private life of the distinguished composer and lyricist is unable to say with what fidelity the picture adheres to the facts of Cole Porter's career. To him, that particular aspect of the production doesn't especially matter.

The salient ponit is that in every technical phase of film-making "Night and Day" is about as close to perfection as the sound-and-color cinema has been able to reach.

These screen biographies of ppoular composers—"The Great Victor Herbert," "Yankee Doodle Dandy," life story of the late George M. Cohan, and the like—in at least one mind always create a feeling of chagrin that it should not have been remembered that one man wrote all those tunes. The experience was repeated again yesterday.

If "Night and Day" had nothing else to recommend it, it would be memorable as a reminder of Porter's contribution to the melodic richness of his day. One loses count of the songs that are introduced during the action, but remembers that among them are such as the title number, "Rosalie," "Begin the Beguine," "Don't Fence Me In," the Yale "Bulldog Song," "Do It Again," "I've Got You Under My Skin," "In An Old-fashioned Garden," "In the Still of the Night" and perhaps twice as many more.

All are sung by competent vocalists, with the major "production numbers" falling to Ginny Simms, Jane Wyman and Mary Martin, who restores "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" to its original luster.

Mr. Porter is a fellow of some stature, in case you'd never thought about it.

This observance of the birthday of sound that has been going on for many weeks now—to culminate Tuesday—evidently has left its imprint on public consciousness. Anyone in quest of Zone Manager John J. Payette, in charge of the Warner interests in the Washington area, will find him under that mound of congratulatory messages. The one from Commissioner John Russell Young heads the local list, on which are to be found signatories representing all levels of Capital life, in and out of the picture industry. The occasion deserves it.

Tickets for the all-star amateur boxing show, sponsored by the Washington Variety Club, are now on sale at the Willard and Shoreham Hotels, Sports Center, 8th and D sts. nw.; Capital Pleasure Club, 1128 U st. nw., and the ball park. The event will be run off in Griffith Sadium on Friday night, August 16. The star attraction will be the personal appearance of World Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis, who will referee several of the bouts. Tickets are priced at $3 ringside, $2 for upper and lower boxes, and $1 general admission. Ticket Chairman Eddie Talbert makes known that all boxoffice premiums have been waived for this 100 per cent charity bill for the benefit of the Junior Police and Citizens Corps. The time to buy is right now.

Tightening the Lines

A new merger of interests has been consummated whereby the production activities of Universal Pictures Co., Inc., and International Pictures Corp. will be consolidated as of October 1 into a new organization to be known as the Universal International Production Co.

The new company will produce pictures of distinction and plans to release 25 top-bracket films in its first year.

The "program pictures" formerly made by Universal—"westerns," serials an dlow-budget feature releases—will be completely abandoned.

The announcement is made by J. Arthur Rank Organization Ltd., Universal Pictures Co., Inc., International Pictures Corp., and United World Pictures Co., following a series of conferences in London.

The United World Pictures Co., Inc., will be absorbed into the new organization for the distribution of Universal International Pictures releases and will also distribute the Rank pictures in the United States and Latin America.

The close association of two strong production units—Universal International in the United States and the J. Arthur Rank organization in England, will make possible a regular and carefully planned interchange of artists, directors and writers, thus greatly enhancing the worldwide appeal of the product of both groups.

If you care, the Theater Guild has purchased George Kelly's new play, "The Fatal Weakness," for next-season production. Let us hope it will prove not to have one.

Rev. Albert Lucas Will Preach at Communion Rite

The Rev. Albert H. Lucas, D. D., headmaster of St. Alban's School for Boys and a canon of Washington Cathedral, will preach at the 11 a. m. service of Holy Communion in the cathedral tomorrow. The flag of the State of Wisconsin will be carried at both the morning and 4 p. m. services and special prayers ofered for the Governor and people of that State.

Holy Communion will also be celebrated at 7:30 a. m. and again at 9:30 a. m. At the later service, in Bethlehem Chapel, the preacher will be the Rev. George J. Cleaveland, canon librarian of the cathedral. Canon Cleaveland will also preach at the 4 o'clock.

Immediately following the 4 p. m. service the monthly recital on the great organ will be played by Richard Wayne Dirksen, assistant cathedral organist and choirmaster.

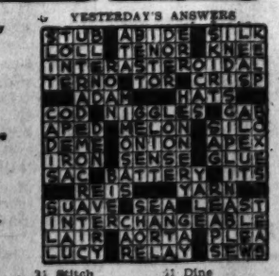
YESTERDAY'S ANSWERS



THE LAND IS BRIGHT

LEONARD LYONS
The Land Is Bright!

(Leonard Lyons is in Europe. His guest columnist today is Julius A. Krug, the Secretary of the Interior.)

New York, Aug. 2.—On my recent Western trip a bright, young, redheaded Army sergeant who acted as our plane steward said to me, "Mr. Krug, I wouldn't trade jobs with you for anything—dull meeting all day long and stuffy banquets every night—no night clubs—no dancing—no fun! Even Army generals get a better break than that!"

Julius A. Krug

The sergeant had a point, but the thousands of "dull" meetings I have attended during the past five years and particularly during the past three months as Secretary of the Interior, have been an exciting school for knowledge seldom found in textbooks—or in the Stock Club either for that matter.

For example, they have given me a feel for the dynamics of American industrial development and an appreciative understanding of the economic and political factors involved over the decades as one exciting new industry follows another from struggling birth through terrible competitive battles of youth, to the maturity and stability of their economic destiny.

At the moment, the aircraft industry, only a few years ago a rather strange and wayward child with a doubtful future, is contesting for the foremost position in the entire transportation firmament. It is interesting to observe the personalities that make up these industries at their various stages. It is hard to find in our history any industry with such top-flight talent as now lead the airplane manufacturing and air transport companies.

Even in the most glamorous days of our other major industries it would not be easy to find a group of manufacturers with the courage, imagination, vitality and leadership you find among men like Don Douglas, Dutch Kindleberger, Bob Gross, Harry Woodhead, and the most of others who built up our great air fleet during the war; or among C. R. Smith, Juan Trippe, Jack Frye and Croile Hunter who are pushing the frontiers of American air transport around the world.

It was in anther dull meeting that I learned that three of our greatest rivers originate within 25 miles of one another. This fact was not fully dramatized for me until I saw all three of them from a plane cruising at 12,000 feet over northwest Wyoming—the headwaters of the Columbia, the Colorado and the Missouri, arising from the beautiful mountains in the vicinity of Yellowstone Park, and finding their way to the Atlantic and the Pacific through widely divergent river courses.

I found out in the West that the old-fashioned prospector is still looked upon as the most reliable, most successful explorer for new deposits. The large mining companies limit most of their work to areas where deposits are known to exist, but the prospector takes out into the hills and sometimes finds valuable ores despite the warnings of the geologists that the rock structure of the area does not favor new discoveries. We have been able to find out a great deal about the diverse geology of all our great country through scientific surveys and research studies.

Under one area you may find oil, in another copper or other valuable minerals, and under other vast areas with similar outward appearance we so far have found nothing of value. In Copper Hill at Butte, Montana, is the world's biggest and richest concentrated deposit of copper, and three million dollars' worth of metals have already been recovered from its mines. Yet in the surrounding hills which look exactly the same to the layman, no commercial deposits have been found.

Too much Government in business is the general complaint of the wealthy, but I have heard no complaints about the Government in the fur seal industry up in the tiny Pribilof Islands in the Bering Sea which contribute the Nation's entire supply of fur seal pelts. When Uncle Sam took over the management of the seal herd, only a few remained out of the millions which inhabited the islands when the white man first came. Now, with careful handling, about three million seals return to these islands every summer. And the United States, which paid $7,200,000 for Alaska, has received back over 11 million dollars for the pelts of fur seals alone.

Many of the businessmen who came to Washington during the war complained loudly that they found their greatest frustration in dealing with members of Congress. Many dull meetings were made duller by these complaints. In my view, this was not the fault of the Congress but rather a lack of appreciation on the part of the businessmen that Senators and Congressmen represent the public and the basic fact that under our form of government they set our Nation's policy. This is quite a contrast to most large businesses where the individual stockholders have but little to do with selecting a board of directors and where all too frequently the board of directors have very little to do in settling corporate policy.

If Congress grants any form of reasonable restraint over spiraling prices and wages, the United States should look forward to the greatest period of prosperity in its history. There is a tremendous need for materials and goods of every kind, not only here but in the world at large. There is tremendous purchasing power in this country and more being created with every passing month. There are hundreds of new and important industries. There are new plants and new processes. There is an industrial and commercial knowhow, the equal of which the country has never had before. Our greatest uncertainty is the stability of prices without which manufacturers and producers cannot expand and without which the value of the purchaser's dollar is constantly in jeopardy. Congress must function and set the Nation's policy in this regard.

Despite the protestations that newspapers publish only the news, it is more necessary than ever to distill out the facts from speculations, predictions and political conclusions.

Mr. Kanin Has Plans!

Hollywood, Aug. 2.—In London I asked Laurence Olivier what plans he and Vivien Leigh had for future pictures. He replied: "You'll have to ask Garson Kanin." Well, at Ethel Barrymore's luncheon for the Kanins, I got my answer. Larry and Vivien will meet the Kanins here in January, 1947. They've discussed 10 stories—decided on none. When they decide they probably will go to Arizona for a couple months while the script is being written, then return here and make the picture. That is the present, and as Garson said, "Delightful plan." They're intimate friends. Garson and Vivien met at George Cukor's house while Vivien was making "Waterloo Bridge." They've been friends ever since . . . It was at Cukor's also that Garson met Ruth Gordon, now his wife. Since marriage, Ruth has become soignee and slick—physically and mentally. Her new play, which she'll do in New York this fall, is the story of her own life. One of Ruth's first acting jobs was with Maude Adams at the Empire Theater. She forgot to ask what salary she was getting. At the end of the week, she was handed $35 and wondered how on earth she'd spend all that money.

RED SOX LOSE THIRD IN ROW, 7 TO 1

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Chicago, Aug. 2.—The Nats aren't happy. Their troubles range from anemia of the batting averages to real or fancied grievances against Manager Ossie Bluege. After losing three straight to the Browns, Bluege isn't happy, either. So few Washington runners are able to get past third base, Coach Joe Judge is thinking of hiring himself out as a defensive fullback in the off-season.

POVICH

Catcher Mike Guerra was ready to pull up stakes in Cleeveland last week and go home to Cuba. He was insulted when Bluege assigned Al Evans to catch both games of a double-header on a hot day, and in his best Spanish said PHOOEY on the whole baseball business in America. Bluege calmed him with the aid of his fellow-Cuban, Gil Torres, who talked to Guerra like a Spanish uncle and persuaded him to stay with the team.

Thatt was just fine, until a few days later at St. Louis. Torres, looking over Bluege's shoulder at the Washington lineup, discovered that he was being benched, and he was insulted, too. "I tank I go home," said Torres in his best Garbo manner, and forthwith took off his uniform. Bluege suspended him without pay, for all of three hours. They made up and Torres stayed on with the club. But he still refuses to be happy.

Lest you get the idea that it's Cuban temperament that is flaring on the Nats, it isn't. Second Baseman Gerry Priddy, a six-generation American, is fed up and makes no bones about it. He's tired of working with a different shortstop every other day. He never knows how the ball is coming to him on force-outs and double plays, and he's weary of getting hurt taking bad throws from different guys. He thinks if he had one guy to work with, however bad, he might learn how to protect himself.

The left side of his infield has been giving Bluege fits all year. He started out in spring training with a third-base weakness and there has been no improvement. He played Sherry Robertson, Clark Griffith's nephew, at the position and was accused of nepotism. George Myatt recovered from a foot fracture just in time to crack his knee and put himself out for the season. The club bought Billy Hitchcock from the Tigers to play third base, and Bluege is now using him at shortstop.

Several weeks ago when Bluege conceived the somewhat bright idea of using Hitchcock at shortstop instead of third base, he was balked. Hitchcock wouldn't play short. Said he signed a contract last spring with the Tigers in which he had an agreement that if he were used at shortstop he'd get a $1500 bonus. Bluege had to take it up with the front office before he could make the switch.

Pitcher Marino Pieretti is beefing about the fact that he led the club in victories for the first half of last year, and hasn't been given a starting chance this season. Outfielder George Binks, who led the team in runs batted in last season, is on the bench and can't understand it. He wants Bluege to play him or trade him, inasmuch as four clubs in the league would like his services.

Roger Wolff hasn't started a game in six weeks, and the doctors are telling him it would be wise for him to lay off for the rest of the season because of his torn side muscles. Against his own ideas he pitched batting practice in Cleveland a week ago. That apparently set him back. His doctor in St. Louis told him not to pick up a ball for six weeks.

Bluege thought it would be a good idea on June 15 to get rid of Jeff Heath. It did seem like a right fair sort of idea at the time, but this week in St. Louis it had a painful aftermath. Heath drove in the winning runs in two straight games for the Browns, and then hit a homer, single and double to help win the third game. That's baseball, says Bluege, but it doesn't alter the fact that the trade is beginning to look very unwise.

When Gil Coan was brought up to the Nats from Chattanooga, Clark Griffith declared, "He won't sit on our bench. If he can't break into our regular lineup, we'll farm him out so he can get more experience." Coan has been warming the bench virtually all season, getting a lot of experience in bench-warming, no doubt.

There's nothing wrong with Buck Newsom that a few more wins won't cure, but this week he was one of the unhappy Nats. He drew lots with Dutch Leonard in Cleveland to see which one would oppose Bob Feller, and Newsom lost, and won Feller. He held Cleveland to three hits but couldn't win. That was not as painful for Newsom, though, as what happened in Chicago a few days later. He went there representing the Washington club in the contract discussions with the owners and when it bolled down to the selection of a three-man commitee to argue the players' case, the name of Newsom was lost in the shuffle. Dirty politics, no doubt.

Players Ask For Pension Pool Series

By Bill Boni

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—What probably has been the dream of many a baseball fan—to stack the National League against the American right down the line from pacesette rto tail-ender—may come true if the major league club owners approve a proposal drafted today by player delegates from each National League team.

This plan, designed to rais funds for a player pension pool, would set aside an early day each July on which the rival league teams would be matched on the basis of the July 1 standings.

Submitted to this morning's player meeting, and credited by some sources to the Dodger players as a group and by others to Billy Jurges of the Chicago Cubs, the plan was approved by the 15 delegates and was the principal topic of discussion.

Funds to be Needed

No matter what the final scheme, funds will be necessary. It is in this respect that the proposed "holiday" looms as important, for it is estimated such a series of games might raise a gross of $230,000—figuring on an average attendance of 50,000 for the eight games, at an average admission fee of slightly less than a dollar.

The holiday scheme, together with other proposals drawn up by the National League player delegates at their first meeting last Monday—a $5500 minimum wage, 60-day severance pay, a $5 per day expense allowance during spring training, etc.—will be submitted to the owners' steering committee next Monday, when it meets with three players each from the National and American Leagues in the New York Yankee offices.

The National League player spokesmen will be Dixie Walker of tthe Dodgers, Marty Marion of the Cards and Billy Herman of the Boston Braves. Johnny Murphy of the Yankees, Joe Kuhel of the Chicago White Sox and Meel Harder of the Cleveland Indians will represent the junior circuit players. The steering committee consists of League Presidents Ford Frick of the National and William Harridge of the American, Owners Sam Breadon of the Cardinals, Phil Yawkey of the Cubs, Larry MacPhail of the Yankees, and Tom Yawkey of the Boston Red Sox.

Fifteen Players Attend

The holiday plan was the only new development at this morning's player meeting. For the rest, the group went over points already brought out last Monday, seeking to elaborate on some and eliminate others.

Fifteen players attended, Pitcher Fritz Ostermueller of the Pittsburgh Pirates being the only delegate absent. He had a date to pitch against the Giants this afternoon, and won the first game of a double-header.

The player representatives will meet again late next week, to hear a report from Walker, Marion and Herman on what took place at the discussion with the club owners. A proposal to have each of the eight National League clubs represented at that session was voted down today.

Bucs Split With Giants

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates clouted four home runs today, but the tail-end Bucs had to be satisfied with a split in their double-header with the New York Giants.

In the opener, veteran lefthander Fritz Ostermueller set the Giants down on two hits in pitching the Pirates to a 6-5 win. Three home runs by Maurice Van Robays and Elbie Fletcher off starter Dave Koslo accounted for all of Pittsburgh's runs.

Frankie Gustine and Bill Salkeld belted round trippers for the Pirates in the nightcap, but the bases were empty on both occasinos and Frankie Frisch's crew went down to a 3-2 defeat.

Bogley Gains Finals In Tennis Tourney

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug. 2.—Gilbert Bogley, 15-year-old tennis sensation from Washington, D. C., Landon School, tonight was within one match of attaining a height never before reached by a Capital City netman—the National Boys Tournament championship.

Young Bogley, seeded second, advanced to the final of the National tourney here this afternoon by decisively defeating Ernest duBray of San Francisco, 6—3, 6—0. His opponent in the final tomorrow will be third-seeded Jerry DeWitt also of San Francisco, who scored a 4—6, 6—2, 6—2 victory over top-seeded Keston Demling, jr., of River Forest, Ill., this afternoon.

Gil's dad, Aubrey Bogley, was scheduled to leave Washington by plane at 11 o'clock tonight to be present for what he hopes will be his son's first national triumph.

The five-foot six-inch star, who learned his tennis fundamentals from Columbia, Md., Country Club Pro Frank (Buddy) Goeltz, has been building up to his big chance for quite a while. Last December, after taking the Eastern Boys championship in New York City, he advanced to the final of the National Indoor tourney, before being defeated.

The past spring, he won the local Sidwell Friends Schoolboy Invitational boys' and junior championships for the second consecutive year. He still has another year remaining at Landon, where he'll get his chance to win letters in baseball and basketbal lfor the second time, and also will become eligible to win permanent possession of the Friends trophies.

In the National junior tourney, running concurrently with the boys' play, Herbie Flam, 17-year-old defending champion from Beverly Hills, Calif., and Herbert (Buddy) Behrens of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., seeded second, advanced to the final. Flam blanked eighth seeded Gilbert Shea of Los Angeles, 6—0, 6—0, in a match requiring only 35 minutes. Behrens scored an impressive 6—1, 6—3 victory over Hugh Stewart of San Marino, Calif., the national interscholastic champion.

Ransom Paces St. Paul Golf

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 2 (AP).—Henry Ransom, 38-year-old rangy professional golfer from Houston, Tex., took the lead in the St. Paul $10,000 Open today, shooting a consistent four-under-par 63, just one stroke off his opening score for a 135 total.

His below-par score was just one of many as the touring pros and top amateurs unleosed some of their best golf to gain a position for the final two days of play. Only the low 64 scorers and those tied for the last position will complete the remaining two days of play ending Sunday.

Ransom's 135 total nosed out Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C., posted a 134.

Grouped just behind Palmer were Dick Metz and Jim Ferrier, both of Chicago, and Clayton Haefner of Charlotte, N. C., with 137 figures for the 36 holes.

In all, some 28 contestants bettered par, while another dozen equaled regulation figures in today's play. The best score today was Ferrier's 66 which matched Palmer's opening round.

Dom DiMaggio Out With Injury

Detroit, Aug. 2 (AP).—Dominic DiMaggio, Boston Red Sox regular center fielder whose hitting has fallen off slightly on the league leaders' current road trip, was out of the line-up today with a minor wrist injury as the Red Sox tangled with the Detroit Tigers.

Trainer Win Green said that DiMaggio's wrist was slightly sprained.

"I don't remember exactly when or how it happened," DiMaggio said, "but it has been bothering me for about a week. I ought to be able to play again in a couple of days."

A Telegram From Stalin

Boston, Aug. 2 (AP).—Gretchen Merrill, 20-year-old National Figure Skating Champion since 1941, was being photographed on the terrace of her home for a movie short today when her mother called out that there was a cable for her.

Joseph Stalin

"Who's it from?" Gretchen asked.

"Joseph Stalin of Russia," her mother said.

"I tripped over all kinds of wires and lights going to read it," the blond champion grinned.

Te message from the Russian leader asked Miss Merrill—through the news agency, Tass—for a statement "to greet your fellow sportsmen in the Soviet Union" on sports day.

Miss Merrill replied with "a very special message of friendship to the figure skaters" and added that if they would come to America for a skating visit, "I will meet them at the boat."

Talbert Wins Over Moylan In Net Play

Southampton, N. Y., Aug. 2 (AP).—Top-seeded Billy Talbert of Wilmington, Del.; Gardnar Mulloy of Miami, Fla.; Seymour Greenberg of Chicago and Alejo Russell of Buenos Aires advanced to the semi-final round of the annual Meadow Club invitation tennis tournament today.

Talbert, who had decided to default on the first day of the tournament and later reconsidered, smashed to the fourth round by downing Edward Moylan of Trenton, N. J., 6—3, 6—1. The No. 1 man in the rankings slipped on his injured left knee while making a shot in the sixth game of the second set, but after a brief rest resumed his easy victory over Moylan.

Mulloy's victim was Sidney Wood of New York, the veteran internationalist who was rated No. 5. Mulloy had to come from behind in both sets as he swept to a 6—4, 6—2 triumph.

Russell had a tough uphill scrap in downing Fred Kovaleski of Detroit, 9-11, 6-1, 6-4. The Detroit Army vet who had surprised with an upset win over Bob Falkenburg earlier in the week, tired after the lengthy opening set. Russell eventually won out because he was in better condition, Kovaleski having recently been discharged from the Army.

Greenberg, twice a National Clay Courts champ, had the least trouble in disposing of William Canning of Le Jolla, Calif., 6-4, 6-3. He permitted his opponent to force the play and make the errors. Standing on his own base line, Greenberg refused to go to the net, although Canning tried to draw him into vollies.

Talbert and Mulloy moved into the semifinal of the doubles when they defeated Greenberg and Dan Sullivan of Sacramento, Calif., 10-8, 6-1; Bob Falkenburg of Hollywood, Calif., and Bob Kimbrell of Los Angeles halted Jack Tuero of New Orleans and Jim Brink of Seattle, 6-4, 4-6, 11-9 to gain their bracket.

Trout Hurls Five-Hitter For Tigers

Detroit, Aug. 2 (AP).—Rattling 13 hits off Tex Hughson and Jim Bagby, the Detroit Tigers slapped down the league-leading Boston Red Sox, 7 to 1 today as Paul (Dizzy) Trout pitched a scintillating five-hitter.

It was the third straight licking for the Bosox, who lost two in a row at Cleveland before arriving here to be shackled by one of Trout's best pitching jobs of the year.

Dizzy had lost four in a row—the last three by shutout scores—but his luck was all good today as only one Boston runner got as far as second in the first eight innings. Trout lost his shutout in the ninth by walking Ted Williams and Rudy York before Bobby Doerr rifled a single to center.

The Tigers had Hughson in hot water most of the time, tagging the usually dependable righthander for 11 hits in the seven innings he worked.

Birdie Tebbetts' double scored Dick Wakefield, who had singled, in the second inning and the Tigers bunched three singles for another run in the third and three more hits for a pair of tallies in the fifth.

The win was Detroit's third this year over the Red Sox, who have beaten Detroit 13 times.

Drug Case At Bel Air

Baltimore, Aug. 2 (AP).—Chairman George P. Mahoney of the Maryland Racing Commission said today a horse he claims was involved in a "ringer" case at Bel Air race track also was found to have been drugged—with the commission unable to do anything about it.

Under a recent ruling of the Maryland Court of Appeals, Mahoney said, the agency is powerless to take any action at all in stimulation cases.

He said the horse was Don't Delay—entered as All Flo at Bel Air and ordered withdrawn from the first race when the commission questioned its identity.

Paul E. Middleton, owner of Don't Delay, and William F. Mink, owner of All Flo, are awaiting preliminary hearing before Magistrate Stanley Spencer at Bel Air next Wednesday on charges of "conspiracy to defraud the Harford County State Fair Association," which runs Bel Air race track. Both are from Wilmington, Del.

(Spencer Drayton, head of the Thoroughbred Racing Protective Bureau, announced Wednesday in New York that a horse which had been running since last November as Allpulch, a 5-year-old gelding, actually was Sea Command, a 5-year-old son of War Admiral.

The horse was scratched at Rockingham Park in New Hampshire, where it was listed under the ownership of the Frances Stable. Drayton said that Allpulch was bought for $210 by "an agent acting for" Mink.

Golf Play Goes To Mrs. Giles

Mrs. Seale Giles, representing the host club, triumphed over a field of 72 linkswomen from 11 clubs yesterday to gain low gross honors at Indian Spring Country Club in the annual Ladies' Field Day. Her card of 79—8—71 also figured in a triangular tie for low net, but the former Four Corners Club champion elected to accept the gross prize. Mrs. Betty P. Meckley of Kenwood was runner-up in the gross department with an 84.

Mrs. Roy Brister of Washington Golf and Country Club, 101—30—71, deadlocked with Mrs. Vernon House of Kenwood, 97—26—71, for the net trophy, and on matched cards Mrs. Brister took the prize.

The blind bogey for golfers not officially handicapped by the WDGA was won by Mrs. S. E. Franks of Manor Club, whose round was 110—36—74. Mrs. E. Harrenson of Army-Navy Club required only 33 shots in winning the putting contest, while Mrs. Meckley finished second with 36.

A drive of 179 yards by Mrs. Rex Howard of Kenwood topped the driving contest, and Mrs. S. F. Little of Army-Navy was runner-up with a 177-yard try.

Mrs. Herbert L. Lacey of Manor Club won the approaching contest, placing her shot 19½ inches from the pin. Mrs. Meckley finished second, 2 feet 10 inches from the cup.

Hoya Training To End Today

Georgetown University's three-week mid-summer football practice drills end today when a regulation game is played at 2 p. m., on the Medical School field.

Coach Jack Hagerty has divided the squad into two teams—the Blues and Grays. He will master-Coaches Maurice "Mush" Dubofsky and George Murtaugh will handle the other.

Veeck Signs 'Entertainer'

Cleveland, Aug. 2 (AP).—Another act was added to the Cleveland Indians' baseball circus today as showman Bill Veeck announced the purchase of shortstop Jackie Price, who "won't hit much but is the greatest baseball entertainer in the country."

The Tribe chief said Larry MacPhail, New York Yankees' president and sponsor of fashion shows in the Bombers' stadium, had "tried to grab Jackie—but 'Old Will' go there first."

Coolidge Golfer Enters Tourney

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 2 (AP).—More than 75 boys under 18 years from nearly every State in the Union and Washington, D. C., are expected to compete in the first National Junior Golf championships at Spokane's Indian Canyon Golf Course starting Monday, tournament Chairman Ed Schmauder said today.

Each State may enter four boys in qualifying play, with Spokane allotted eight entries not charged to the Washington quota.

Washington, D. C.'s lone entry is Jay Wolfe of Coolidge High. He qualified for the Spokane tournament by firing a 78 in Cumberland, Md., Y. M. C. A. tournament on July 8.

Spring Games Come In for Gripe

Cincinnati, Aug. 2 (AP).—Major league ball players are missing the boat on the best gripe possible if they don't seek modification of the extended spring exhibition series.

Several of the Queen City's diamond experts, most of them former big leaguers, were of that opinion today after studying the proposals drafted by player representatives for submission to the major league owners' policy committee Monday.

"For my money," said a one-time star catcher who declined use of his name, "the exhibition tour is the most dangerous part of the season for ball players. Many a promising career has ended with an exhibition game injury at Podunk.

"It would be in the best interest of the players," he concluded, "if they cut the usual 20 to 30 exhibition games to a maximum of 10, and for that matter reduce the spring training season to one month for regulars. That's all they need."

Two Local Men Win Maryland Boat Events

St. Michaels, Md., August 2.—A pair of Washingtonians, James E. Baden and O. E. Hale, helped share the spotlight as the Miles River Yacht Club's Silver Anniversary Regatta got under way here today.

Baden registered an average speed of 37.267 miles per hour to win the Class C, Division 1 outboard event, while Hale took first in the outboard hydroplane, class A contest with an average speed of 53.412 miles per hour.

The second of two heats in the race for unlimited displacement class runabouts was captured in today's regatta by John Bramble, Baltimore, driving Pep IV, owned by Ernest J. Chase. Pep IV sped the 10-mile distance at 56.2 miles per hour.

This Clears Up Campbell Case

. . . Friendship Principal Factor in Settlement

TWO phases of the Bruce Campbell case should be cleared up in fairness to Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Senators.

One is the probable general impression that Griffith agreed to meet Campbell's salary claims principally because Griffith had little or no choice in the matter under Selective Service Act regulations.

The other is Griffith's contention that the agreement reached with Campbell, 37 and a war veteran, will NOT set a precedent for similar cases in organized baseball.

Daniel B. Maher, assistant United States Attorney who sat in on the conference when the agreement was reached in Griffith's ball park office, told The Post yesterday:

"Mr. Griffith scrupulously kept his part in every side of this case, not because he had been crowded into a corner but out of his inherent fairness, I am convinced.

"Mr. Griffith said he would 'make Campbell whole' again. This he did by NOT only reaching a salary agreement with him but by also landing him a job with the Minneapolis team of the American Association.

"Mr. Griffith made this connectoin for Campbell within 24 hours after he learned that Bruce wanted, above all else, to reestablish himself in baseball.

"If every employer was as willing as Mr. Griffith to NOT only meet hequirements of the Selective Service Act but go beyond them, there would be little room for complaint."

Griffith himself told The Post:

"The fact that I was willing to settle the Bruce Campbell case should NOT be looked upon as setting a precedent for future cases of this sort, for I was prompted in making his settlement by my friendship and good feeling for Bruce for what he has meant to baseball."

When Campbell was released in the spring after a trial, the Senators fulfilled obligations outlined by A. B. "Happy" Chandler, baseball commissioner, governing returned national defense players.

These obligations included: (1) giving a player his old job back at the same salary he received when he entered service; (2) training him for 35 days; (3) playing him in spring games to determine his value; (4) paying him 15 days' salary before giving him an unconditional release.

When Campbell left the Senators, he thanked Griffith for lining up a job for him with Buffalo of the International League. Campbell was to received $450 a month and a $1500 bonus, $750 due July 1 and the balance July 15. He received the first half of the bonus but was released before the second half became due.

"I think that I have more than fulfilled any obligations which I might have owed Bruce Campbell," Griffith said.

What Campbell Gets

Campbell estimates that he will receive from $5000 to $6000 from the Senators. This amount represents the difference between his 1942 salary, $9000, and what he will earn this year.

Giants Add Farm

Oshkosh, Wis., Aug. 2 (AP).—The Oshkosh Giants of the Wisconsin State Baseball League have signed a working agreement with the New York Giants for 1947, C. W. Bronson, business maneger of the club, announced today.

Reiser's Injury Slight, He'll Rest

Brooklyn, Aug. 2 (AP).—Study of the X-rays taken of Pete Reiser, Brooklyn outfielder injured yesterday when he crashed into a concrete wall during a baseball game with St. Louis, showed only a mild concussion, Club Physician Dr. Dominic Rossi said today.

He recommended that the player remain out of uniform for two or three days and to remain on the Irish Coach Seeks Boston College Post

Boston, Aug. 2 (AP).—Ed Doherty, erstwhile assistant football coach at Notre Dame, arrived in Boston today and promptly announced he was seeking the backfield coaching job at Boston College.

The Eagle quarterback of 1943 declined to give his reasons for leaving South Bend, but asserted he had not signed at B. C. Reports last night from South Bend said he was leaving there to take a more lucrative post at an Eastern college.

McLane Wins A.A.U. Swim

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 2 (AP).—Young Jimmy McLane of Akron, Ohio, was triumphant today in the first test in defense of his 1500-meter free-style title as the national AAU senior's men's swimming meet got underway ahead of schedule because of a heavy entry list.

McLane negotiated the distance in a preliminary heat in 19:54, more than 27 seconds ahead of Jerry Kerschner of Bunker Hill, Ind., second in the field of eight qualifiers.

Other qualifiers were Charlie Oda, Hawaii; Fred Taioli, San Francisco Olympic Club; Ross Bean, unattached; George Hoogerhyde, Michigan State; Walter Stewart, San Diego, and Clemente Meijia, Mexico.

Track Star Swims Straits in 2 Hours

Mackinaw City, Mich., Aug. 2 (AP).—A sophomore track start from the University of Kentucky, 21-year-old Bill Chambers, boasted a triumph in a new field today after successfully swimming across the turbulent 5-mile Straits of Mackinac.

Believed to be the first ever to negotiate the dangerous currents and choppy waters, Chambers swam from Old Mackinac Point to the northern shore of the straits near St. Ignace in 3 hours 15 minutes and 23 seconds escorted by friends in three boats.

Terp Alumni Form Club to Aid Sports

COLLEGE PARK, Md.—Formation of a "Terrapins Club" to promote good will toward athletics and athletes at the University of Maryland was announced today by a group of alumni.

George C. Cook, Hyattsville, Md., president of the new club, said one of its functions would be to set up scholarships to benefit athletes who also are deserving academically. The club has no formal connection with the university.

One member, questioned about the purpose of the club, said: "I feel that athletes and athletics aren't given the consideration they deserve by the public. Maybe our club can help change that. That's why I joined."

Charlottesville, Va.—Norton G. Pritchett, director of athletics at the University of Virginia, announced today the organization of a junior varsity football squad.

Milt Parlow, Cavalier football captain recently declared ineligible for conference competition, is regarded as a possibility for coaching the JV squad—a possible supplanted for a freshman team to polish up future first string material. The junior varsity wil consist mainly of surplus men from the varsity such as freshmen and other boys who need additional experience.

JV games already have been scheduled with Virginia Tech for Charlottesville on October 25 and with North Carolina.

COLLEGE PARK, Md.—Fausto Rubini, head boxing coach in 1943, and Frank Cronin, start intercollegiate clouter in 1939, have been named assistant varsity boxing coaches and instructors in the department of physical education at the University of Maryland.

Cronin was recently separated from the Army, where he was a major, and Rubini left the Navy a short while ago. He served as a lieutenant.

Covington, Va.—Camp Lee's Travelers are expected to represent Virginia in the national semipro baseball tournament to be staged at Wichita, Kans., later this month.

The Travelers won the right to be the Old Dominion representative after winning the State semipro title here yesterday by splitting a twin bill with Glasgow, taking the nightcap, 8-2, after being blanked in the opener, 2-0.

Capt. Joe Nelson, Traveller second baseman, chosen the most valuable player of the tournament, was named to the all-star team as was Paul Siple, Glasgow shortstop. The former was presented with $100 for his team and the latter $50.

NORFOLK, Va.—The Washington Redskins today assigned two promising backs to the Norfolk Shamrocks of the Dixie Pro-Football League.

Bob Holmes a former Marine, and Frank Cady, former soldier, and now in training with the National League Skins at Washington, will report here next week with Backfield Coach Larry Wilson in plenty of time for the Shamrocks' opening drill on August 15.

Rated one of the Skins' most likely to succeed rookies, Holmes is a triple threater. He is 24, stands an even 6 feet and weighs 195 pounds. He makes his home at San Jose, Calif.

Cady is larger, scaling 215 pounds and standing 6 feet 1 inch. Prior to his Army duty he spent one year at the University of Maryland and was scheduled to return there, but changed his mind to cast his lot in pro football. Cady's home is in Washington, D. C.

Richmond, Va.—The State women's golf championship will be played at the Ingleside Country Club in Staunton during the week of September 23, Fred J. D. Mackay, secretary of the Virginia State Golf Association, said today.

This will be the first Virginia women's championship since 1942, when Mrs. Lily Harper Martin of Portsmouth retained her title at the Hermitage Country Club here.

Mrs. Martin is not expected to defend her title. Only one former champion, Mrs. Clara Priddy of Charlottesville is expected to compete.

7-Year-Old Wins Out by 4 Lengths

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bel Air, Md., Aug. 2.—The price of racing went up today when an across-the-board mutuel of $119.50 to win; $31.90 and $9.80 was hung out after a 7-year-old named Albratross had laughed at a field of sprinters in the Conowingo Purse, the day's feature. Racing in the colors of Mrs. J. McCall Marshall, the 7-year-old gave his scattered backers the thrill of a lifetime by jogging home four lengths in front of Charles E. East's Even Break. In third position came S. M. Folin's Erato.

Albratross fell down trying to run in Mexico and performed with little success in a local steeplechase. With She's Scotch and other star sprinters in today's field, the son of Mate was given little or no chance. However, Jockey Walter Gruber booted the veteran to the wire in time of 1:50 1-5 as most of the assembled 9000 moaned "Where did this bum come from?"

She's Scoch matched strides and then took a slight lead over Albratross early, but the old horse took command and it was all over but the monster pay-off. Even Break, after losing ground early, came gamely to be second. Erato closed willingly to be third.

Jockey Bobby Fitzgerald escaped with cuts and bruises when he was thrown by Riverbank in the eighth race.

J. H. Morris' Gay Venture, a fair flat performer, won over the jumps in the day's steeplechase, turning back Edkar Horn's Bar Ship and E. Ferrante's Hobby's First, among others. Gay Venture was strongly handled by Jockey F. Adams and paid $7.40 while going the about 2 miles in 3:40 3-5. Bar Ship stumbled and almost unseated the rider which cost him a chance at the victory.

The daily double paid a healthy $128.80. Stanley Greene, jr's., Bigz Sneeze won the first race under Jockey Bob Edens' handling while J. Nechamkin's Free Son won the second with George Cusimano booting.

Between races . . . They bet $417,978 here yesterday, just about the figure for Bowie on Thanksgiving Day, 1938 . . . Carlyle Johnson of the Racing Form got off the crack, "The Marlboro meeting, of all places, will be held at Marlboro" . . . Laurel will have two new roads into the plant this fall, Maj. Goss L. Stryker, president of that track, said today . . . Laurel is experimenting with cinder block stalls in a new barn . . . Leon Garrett checked in from Ohio and went into saddle action today . . . Apprentice Eddie Ballenger is improving steadily in his chosen profession . . . Gordon Pearce introduced a brand new apprentice in Pat O'Brien, a Midland, Md., youth.

RED SOX LOSE THIRD IN ROW, 7 TO 1

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, Aug. 2.—The Nats aren't happy. Their troubles range from anemia of the batting averages to real or fancied grievances against Manager Ossie Bluege. After losing three straight to the Browns, Bluege isn't happy, either. So few Washington runners are able to get past third base, Coach Joe Judge is thinking of hiring himself out as a defensive fullback in the off-season.

POVICH

Catcher Mike Guerra was ready to pull up stakes in Cleeveland last week and go home to Cuba. He was insulted when Bluege assigned Al Evans to catch both games of a double-header on a hot day, and in his best Spanish said PHOOEY on the whole baseball business in America. Bluege calmed him with the aid of his fellow-Cuban, Gil Torres, who talked to Guerra like a Spanish uncle and persuaded him to stay with the team.

Thatt was just fine, until a few days later at St. Louis. Torres, looking over Bluege's shoulder at the Washington lineup, discovered that he was being benched, and he was insulted, too. "I tank I go home," said Torres in his best Garbo manner, and forthwith took off his uniform. Bluege suspended him without pay, for all of three hours. They made up and Torres stayed on with the club. But he still refuses to be happy.

Lest you get the idea that it's Cuban temperament that is flaring on the Nats, it isn't. Second Baseman Gerry Priddy, a six-generation American, is fed up and makes no bones about it. He's tired of working with a different shortstop every other day. He never knows how the ball is coming to him on force-outs and double plays, and he's weary of getting hurt taking bad throws from different guys. He thinks if he had one guy to work with, however bad, he might learn how to protect himself.

The left side of his infield has been giving Bluege fits all year. He started out in spring training with a third-base weakness and there has been no improvement. He played Sherry Robertson, Clark Griffith's nephew, at the position and was accused of nepotism. George Myatt recovered from a foot fracture just in time to crack his knee and put himself out for the season. The club bought Billy Hitchcock from the Tigers to play third base, and Bluege is now using him at shortstop.

Several weeks ago when Bluege conceived the somewhat bright idea of using Hitchcock at shortstop instead of third base, he was balked. Hitchcock wouldn't play short. Said he signed a contract last spring with the Tigers in which he had an agreement that if he were used at shortstop he'd get a $1500 bonus. Bluege had to take it up with the front office before he could make the switch.

Pitcher Marino Pieretti is beefing about the fact that he led the club in victories for the first half of last year, and hasn't been given a starting chance this season. Outfielder George Binks, who led the team in runs batted in last season, is on the bench and can't understand it. He wants Bluege to play him or trade him, inasmuch as four clubs in the league would like his services.

Roger Wolff hasn't started a game in six weeks, and the doctors are telling him it would be wise for him to lay off for the rest of the season because of his torn side muscles. Against his own ideas he pitched batting practice in Cleveland a week ago. That apparently set him back. His doctor in St. Louis told him not to pick up a ball for six weeks.

Bluege thought it would be a good idea on June 15 to get rid of Jeff Heath. It did seem like a right fair sort of idea at the time, but this week in St. Louis it had a painful aftermath. Heath drove in the winning runs in two straight games for the Browns, and then hit a homer, single and double to help win the third game. That's baseball, says Bluege, but it doesn't alter the fact that the trade is beginning to look very unwise.

When Gil Coan was brought up to the Nats from Chattanooga, Clark Griffith declared, "He won't sit on our bench. If he can't break into our regular lineup, we'll farm him out so he can get more experience." Coan has been warming the bench virtually all season, getting a lot of experience in bench-warming, no doubt.

There's nothing wrong with Buck Newsom that a few more wins won't cure, but this week he was one of the unhappy Nats. He drew lots with Dutch Leonard in Cleveland to see which one would oppose Bob Feller, and Newsom lost, and won Feller. He held Cleveland to three hits but couldn't win. That was not as painful for Newsom, though, as what happened in Chicago a few days later. He went there representing the Washington club in the contract discussions with the owners and when it boiled down to the selection of a three-man commitee to argue the players' case, the name of Newsom was lost in the shuffle. Dirty politics, no doubt.

Players Ask For Pension Pool Series

By Bill Boni

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—What probably has been the dream of many a baseball fan—to stack the National League against the American right down the line from pacesette rto tail-ender—may come true if the major league club owners approve a proposal drafted today by player delegates from each National League team.

This plan, designed to rais funds for a player pension pool, would set aside an early day each July on which the rival league teams would be matched on the basis of the July 1 standings.

Submitted to this morning's player meeting, and credited by some sources to the Dodger players as a group and by others to Billy Jurges of the Chicago Cubs, the plan was approved by the 15 delegates and was the principal topic of discussion.

Funds to be Needed

No matter what the final scheme, funds will be necessary. It is in this respect that the proposed "holiday" looms as important, for it is estimated such a series of games might raise a gross o. $230.-000—figuring on an average attendance of 30,000 for the eight games, at an average a'mission fee of slightly less than a dollar.

The holiday scheme, together with other proposals drawn up by the National League player delegates at their first meeting last Monday—a $5500 minimum wage, 60-day severance pay, a $5 per day expense allowance during spring training, etc.—will be submitted to the owners' steering committee next Monday, when it meets with three players each from the National and American Leagues in the New York Yankee offices.

The National League player spokesmen will be Dixie Walker of tthe Dodgers, Marty Marion of the Cards and Billy Herman of the Boston Braves. Johnny Murphy of the Yankees, Joe Kuhel of the Chicago White Sox and Meel Harder of the Cleveland Indians will represent the junior circuit players. The steering committee consists of League Presidents Ford Frick of the National and William Harridge of the American, Owners Sam Breadon of the Cardinals, Phil Yawkey of the Cubs, Larry MacPhail of the Yankees, and Tom Yawkey of the Boston Red Sox.

Fifteen Players Attend

The holiday plan was the only new development at this morning's player meeting. For the rest, the group went over points already brought out last Monday, seeking to elaborate on some and eliminate others.

Fifteen players attended, Pitcher Fritz Ostermueller of the Pittsburgh Pirates being the only delegate absent. He had a date to pitch against the Giants this afternoon, and won the first game of a double-header.

The player representatives will meet again late next week, to hear a report from Walker, Marion and Herman on what took place at the discussion with the club owners. A proposal to have each of the eight National League clubs represented at that session was voted down today.

Bucs Split With Giants

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates clouted four home runs today, but the tail-end Bucs had to be satisfied with a split in their double-header with the New York Giants.

In the opener, veteran lefthander Fritz Ostermueller set the Giants down on two hits in pitching the Pirates to a 6-5 win. Three home runs by Maurice Van Robays and Elbie Fletcher off starter Dave Koslo accounted for all of Pittsburgh's runs.

Frankie Gustine and Bill Salkeld belted round trippers for the Pirates in the nightcap, but the bases were empty on both occasinos and Frankie Frisch's crew went down to a 3-2 defeat.

Brooklyn, Aug. 2 (AP).—Bill Klem, one-time National League umpiring great, will officiate in the three-game baseball series pitting Brooklyn youngsters against 20 rivals from other parts of the United States, Hawaii and Canada. The games will be played in Ebbets Field August 7, 8, 9.

Bogley Gains Finals In Tennis Tourney

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug. 2.—Gilbert Bogley, 15-year-old tennis sensation from Washington, D. C., Landon School, tonight was within one match of attaining a height never before reached by a Capital City netman—the National Boys Tournament championship.

Young Bogley, seeded second, advanced to the final of the National tourney here this afternoon by decisively defeating Ernest duBray of San Francisco, 6—3, 6—0. His opponent in the final tomorrow will be third-seeded Jerry DeWitt also of San Francisco, who scored a 4—6, 6—2, 6—2 victory over top-seeded Keston Demling, jr., of River Forest, Ill., this afternoon.

Gil's dad, Aubrey Bogley, was scheduled to leave Washington by plane at 11 o'clock tonight to be present for what he hopes will be his son's first national triumph.

The five-foot six-inch star, who learned his tennis fundamentals from Columbia, Md., Country Club Pro Frank (Buddy) Goeltz, has been building up to his big chance for quite a while. Last December, after taking the Eastern Boys championship in New York City, he advanced to the final of the National Indoor tourney, before being defeated.

The past spring, he won the local Sidwell Friends Schoolboy Invitational boys' and junior championships for the second consecutive year. He still has another year remaining at Landon, where he'll get his chance to win letters in baseball and basketbal lfor the second time, and also will become eligible to win permanent possession of the Friends trophies.

In the National junior tourney, running concurrently with the boys' play, Herbie Flam, 17-year-old defending champion from Beverly Hills, Calif., and Herbert (Buddy) Behrens of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., seeded second, advanced to the final. Flam blanked eighth seeded Gilbert Shea of Los Angeles, 6—0, 6—0, in a match requiring only 35 minutes. Behrens scored an impressive 6—1, 6—3 victory over Hugh Stewart of San Marino, Calif., the national interscholastic champion.

Ransom Paces St. Paul Golf

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 2 (AP).—Henry Ransom, 38-year-old rangy professional golfer from Houston, Tex., took the lead in the St. Paul $10,000 Open today, shooting a consistent four-under-par 63, just one stroke off his opening score for a 135 total.

His below-par score was just one of many as the touring pros and top amateurs unleosed some of their best golf to gain a position for the final two days of play. Only the low 64 scorers and those tied for the last position will complete the remaining two days of play ending Sunday.

Ransom's 135 total nosed out Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C., posted a 134.

Grouped just behind Palmer were Dick Metz and Jim Ferrier, both of Chicago, and Clayton Haefner of Charlotte, N. C., with 137 figures for the 36 holes.

In all, some 28 contestants bettered par, while another dozen equaled regulation figures in today's play. The best score today was Ferrier's 66 which matched Palmer's opening round.

Dom DiMaggio Out With Injury

Detroit, Aug. 2 (AP).—Dominic DiMaggio, Boston Red Sox regular center fielder whose hitting has fallen off slightly on the league leaders' current road trip, was out of the line-up today with a minor wrist injury as the Red Sox tangled with the Detroit Tigers.

Trainer Win Green said that DiMaggio's wrist was slightly sprained.

"I don't remember exactly when or how it happened," DiMaggio said, "but it has been bothering me for about a week. I ought to be able to play again in a couple of days."

A Telegram From Stalin

Boston, Aug. 2 (AP).—Gretchen Merrill, 20-year-old National Figure Skating Champion since 1941, was being photographed on the terrace of her home for a movie short today when her mother called out that there was a cable for her.

Joseph Stalin

"Who's it from?" Gretchen asked.

"Joseph Stalin of Russia," her mother said.

"I tripped over all kinds of wires and lights going to read it," the blond champion grinned.

Te message from the Russian leader asked Miss Merrill—through the news agency, Tass—for a statement "to greet your fellow sportsmen in the Soviet Union" on sports day.

Miss Merrill replied with "a very special message of friendship to the figure skaters" and added that if they would come to America for a skating visit, "I will meet them at the boat."

Talbert Wins Over Moylan In Net Play

Southampton, N. Y., Aug. 2 (AP).—Top-seeded Billy Talbert of Wilmington, Del.; Gardnar Mulloy of Miami, Fla.; Seymour Greenberg of Chicago and Alejo Russell of Buenos Aires advanced to the semi-final round of the annual Meadow Club invitation tennis tournament today.

Talbert, who had decided to default on the first day of the tournament and later reconsidered, smashed to the fourth round by downing Edward Moylan of Trenton, N. J., 6—3, 6—1. The No. 1 man in the rankings slipped on his injured left knee while making a shot in the sixth game of the second set, but after a brief rest resumed his easy victory over Moylan.

Mulloy's victim was Sidney Wood of New York, the veteran internationalist who was rated No. 5. Mulloy had to come from behind in both sets as he swept to a 6—4, 6—2 triumph.

Russell had a tough uphill scrap in downing Fred Kovaleski of Detroit, 9-11, 6-1, 6-4. The Detroit Army vet who had surprised with an upset win over Bob Falkenburg earlier in the week, tired after the lengthy opening set. Russell eventually won out because he was in better condition, Kovaleski having recently been discharged from the Army.

Greenberg, twice a National Clay Courts champ, had the least trouble in disposing of William Canning of Le Jolla, Calif., 6-4, 6-3. He permitted his opponent to force the play and make the errors. Standing on his own base line, Greenberg refused to go to the net, although Canning tried to draw him into vollies.

Talbert and Mulloy moved into the semifinal of the doubles when they defeated Greenberg and Dan Sullivan of Sacramento, Calif., 10-8, 6-1; Bob Falkenburg of Hollywood, Calif., and Bob Kimbrell of Los Angeles halted Jack Tuero of New Orleans and Jim Brink of Seattle, 6-4, 4-6, 11-9 to gain their bracket.

Trout Hurls Five-Hitter For Tigers

Detroit, Aug. 2 (AP).—Rattling 15 hits off Tex Hughson and Jim Bagby, the Detroit Tigers slapped down the league-leading Boston Red Sox, 7 to 1 today as Paul (Dizzy) Trout pitched a scintillating five-hitter.

It was the third straight licking for the Bosox, who lost two in a row at Cleveland before arriving here to be shackled by one of Trout's best pitching jobs of the year.

Dizzy had lost four in a row—the last three by shutout scores—but his luck was all good today as only one Boston runner got as far as second in the first eight innings. Trout lost his shutout in the ninth by walking Ted Williams and Rudy York before Bobby Doerr rifled a single to center.

The Tigers had Hughson in hot water most of the time, tagging the usually dependable righthander for 11 hits in the seven innings he worked.

Birdie Tebbetts' double scored Dick Wakefield, who had singled, in the second inning and the Tigers bunched three singles for another run in the third and three more hits for a pair of tallies in the fifth.

The win was Detroit's third this year over the Red Sox, who have beaten Detroit 13 times.

Drug Case At Bel Air

Baltimore, Aug. 2 (AP).—Chairman George P. Mahoney of the Maryland Racing Commission said today a horse he claims was involved in a "ringer" case at Bel Air race track also was found to have been drugged—with the commission unable to do anything about it.

Under a recent ruling of the Maryland Court of Appeals, Mahoney said, the agency is powerless to take any action at all in stimulation cases.

He said the horse was Don't Delay—entered as All Flo at Bel Air and ordered withdrawn from the first race when the commission questioned its identity.

Paul E. Middleton, owner of Don't Delay, and William F. Mink, owner of All Flo, are awaiting preliminary hearing before Magistrate Stanley Spencer at Bel Air next Wednesday on charges of "conspiracy to defraud the Harford County State Fair Association," which runs Bel Air race track. Both are from Wilmington, Del.

(Spencer Drayton, head of the Thoroughbred Racing Protective Bureau, announced Wednesday in New York that a horse which had been running since last November as Allpulch, a 5-year-old gelding, actually was Sea Command, a 5-year-old son of War Admiral.

The horse was scratched at Rockingham Park in New Hampshire, where it was listed under the ownership of the Frances Stable. Drayton said that Allpulch was bought for $210 by "an agent acting for" Mink.

Golf Play Goes To Mrs. Giles

Mrs. Seale Giles, representing the host club, triumphed over a field of 72 linkswomen from 11 clubs yesterday to gain low gross honors at Indian Spring Country Club in the annual Ladies' Field Day. Her card of 79—8—71 also figured in a triangular tie for low net, but the former Four Corners Club champion elected to accept the gross prize. Mrs. Betty P. Meckley of Kenwood was runner-up in the gross department with an 84.

Mrs. Roy Brister of Washington Golf and Country Club, 101—30—71, deadlocked with Mrs. Vernon House of Kenwood, 97—26—71, for the net trophy, and on matched cards Mrs. Brister took the prize.

The blind bogey for golfers not officially handicapped by the WDGA was won by Mrs. S. K. Franks of Manor Club, whose round was 110—36—74. Mrs. E. Harrmann of Army-Navy Club required only 35 shots in winning the putting contest, while Mrs. Meckley finished second with 39.

A drive of 179 yards by Mrs. Rex Howard of Kenwood topped the driving contest, and Mrs. S. F. Little of Army-Navy was runner-up with a 177-yard try.

Mrs. Herbert L. Lacey of Manor Club won the approaching contest, placing her shot 13½ inches from the pin. Mrs. Meckley finished second, 2 feet 10 inches from the cup.

Hoya Training To End Today

Georgetown University's three-week mid-summer football practice drills end today when a regulation game is played at 2 p. m., on the Medical School field.

Coach Jack Hagerty has divided the squad into two teams—the Blues and Grays. He will master-Coaches Maurice "Mush" Dubofsky and George Murtaugh will handle the other.

Four D. C. boys will be in the starting lineups. Buddy Spiess, former Georgetown Prep star, will do the quarterbacking and Phil Funk, former Wilson High standout, will be at right tackle for the Blues. Paul Blaine, Anacostia High star of several years ago, will do the signal calling and Jim Nalls, former Bullis Prep ace, left tackle, will be in the Gray's starting array.

Veeck Signs 'Entertainer'

Cleveland, Aug. 2 (AP).—Another act was added to the Cleveland Indians' baseball circus today as showman Bill Veeck announced the purchase of shortstop Jackie Price, who "won't hit much but is the greatest baseball entertainer in the country."

The Tribe chief said Larry MacPhail, New York Yankees' president and sponsor of fashion shows in the Bombers' stadium, had "tried to grab Jackie—but 'Old Will' go there first."

Coolidge Golfer Enters Tourney

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 2 (AP).—More than 75 boys under 18 years from nearly every State in the Union and Washington, D. C., are expected to compete in the first National Junior Golf championships at Spokane's Indian Canyon Golf Course starting Monday, tournament Chairman Ed Schmauder said today.

Each State may enter four boys in qualifying play, with Spokane allotted eight entries not charged to the Washington quota.

Washington, D. C.'s lone entry is Jay Wolfe of Coolidge High. He qualified for the Spokane tournament by firing a 78 in Cumberland, Md., Y. M. C. A. tournament on July 8.

Spring Games Come In for Gripe

Cincinnati, Aug. 2 (AP).—Major league ball players are missing the boat on the best gripe possible if they don't seek modification of the extended spring exhibition series.

Several of the Queen City's diamond experts, most of them former big leaguers, were of that opinion today after studying the proposals drafted by player representatives for submission to the major league owners' policy committee Monday.

"For my money," said a one-time star catcher who declined use of his name, "the exhibition tour is the most dangerous part of the season for ball players. Many a promising career has ended with an exhibition game injury at Podunk.

"It would be in the best interest of the players," he concluded, "if they cut the usual 20 to 30 exhibition games to a maximum of 10, and for that matter reduce the spring training season to one month for regulars. That's all they need."

This Clears Up Campbell Case

. . . Friendship Principal Factor in Settlement

TWO phases of the Bruce Campbell case should be cleared up in fairness to Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Senators.

One is the probable general impression that Griffith agreed to meet Campbell's salary claims principally because Griffith had little or no choice in the matter under Selective Service Act regulations.

The other is Griffith's contention that the agreement reached with Campbell, 37 and a war veteran, will NOT set a precedent for similar cases in organized baseball.

Daniel B. Maher, assistant United States Attorney who sat in on the conference when the agreement was reached in Griffith's ball park office, told The Post yesterday:

"Mr. Griffith scrupulously kept his part in every side of this case, not because he had been crowded into a corner but out of his inherent fairness, I am convinced.

"Mr. Griffith said he would 'make Campbell whole' again. This he did by NOT only reaching a salary agreement with him but by also landing him a job with the Minneapolis team of the American Association.

"Mr. Griffith made this connectoin for Campbell within 24 hours after he learned that Bruce wanted, above all else, to reestablish himself in baseball.

"If every employer was as willing as Mr. Griffith to NOT only meet hequirements of the Selective Service Act but go beyond them, there would be little room for complaint."

Griffith himself told The Post:

"The fact that I was willing to settle the Bruce Campbell case should NOT be looked upon as setting a precedent for future cases of this sort, for I was prompted in making his settlement by my friendship and good feeling for Bruce for what he has meant to baseball."

What Campbell Gets

Campbell estimates that he will receive from $5000 to $6000 from the Senators. This amount represents the difference between his 1942 salary, $9000, and what he will earn this year.

When Campbell was released in the spring after a trial, the Senators fulfilled obligations outlined by A. B. "Happy" Chandler, baseball commissioner, governing returned national defense players.

These obligations included: (1) giving a player his old job back at the same salary he received when he entered service; (2) training him for 35 days; (3) playing him in spring games to determine his value; (4) paying him 15 days' salary before giving him an unconditional release.

When Campbell left the Senators, he thanked Griffith for lining up a job for him with Buffalo of the International League. Campbell was to received $450 a month and a $1500 bonus, $750 due July 1 and the balance July 15. He received the first half of the bonus but was released before the second half became due.

"I think that I have more than fulfilled any obligations which I might have owed Bruce Campbell," Griffith said.

McLane Wins A.A.U. Swim

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 2 (AP).—Young Jimmy McLane of Akron, Ohio, was triumphant today in the first test in defense of his 1500-meter free-style title as the national AAU senior's men's swimming meet got underway ahead of schedule because of a heavy entry list.

McLane negotiated the distance in a preliminary heat in 19:54, more than 27 seconds ahead of Jerry Kerschner of Bunker Hill, Ind., second in the field of eight qualifiers.

Other qualifiers were Charlie Oda, Hawaii; Fred Taioli, San Francisco Olympic Club; Ross Bean, unattachied; George Hooger-hyde, Michigan State; Walter Stewart, San Diego, and Clemente Meijia, Mexico.

Terp Alumni Form Club to Aid Sports

COLLEGE PARK, Md.—Formation of a "Terrapins Club" to promote good will toward athletics and athletes at the University of Maryland was announced today by a group of alumni.

George C. Cook, Hyattsville, Md., president of the new club, said one of its functions would be to set up scholarships to benefit athletes who also are deserving academically. The club has no formal connection with the university.

One member, questioned about the purpose of the club, said: "I feel that athletes and athletics aren't given the consideration they deserve by the public. Maybe our club can help change that. That's why I joined."

Charlottesville, Va.—Norton G. Pritchett, director of athletics at the University of Virginia, announced today the organization of a junior varsity football squad.

Milt Parlow, Cavalier football captain recently declared ineligible for conference competition, is regarded as a possibility for coaching the JV squad—a possible supplanted for a freshman team to polish up future first string material. The junior varsity will consist mainly of surplus men from the varsity such as freshmen and other boys who need additional experience.

JV games already have been scheduled with Virginia Tech for Charlottesville on October 25 and with North Carolina.

COLLEGE PARK, Md.—Fausto Rubini, head boxing coach in 1943, and Frank Cronin, start intercollegiate clouter in 1939, have been named assistant varsity boxing coaches and instructors in the department of physical education at the University of Maryland.

Cronin was recently separated from the Army, where he was a major, and Rubini left the Navy a short while ago. He served as a lieutenant.

Covington, Va.—Camp Lee's Travelers are expected to represent Virginia in the national semipro baseball tournament to be staged at Wichita, Kans., later this month.

The Travelers won the right to be the Old Dominion representative after winning the State semipro title here yesterday by splitting a twin bill with Glasgow, taking the nightcap, 8-2, after being blanked in the opener, 2-0.

Capt. Joe Nelson, Traveller second baseman, chosen the most valuable player of the tournament, was named to the all-star team as was Paul Siple, Glasgow shortstop. The former was presented with $100 for his team and the latter $50.

NORFOLK, Va.—The Washington Redskins today assigned two promising backs to the Norfolk Shamrocks of the Dixie Pro-Football League.

Bob Holmes a former Marine, and Frank Cady, former soldier, and now in training with the National League Skins at Washington, will report here next week with Backfield Coach Larry Welch in plenty of time for the Shamrocks' opening drill on August 15.

Rated one of the Skins' most likely-to-succeed rookies, Holmes is a triple threater. He is 24, stands an even 6 feet and weighs 195 pounds. He makes his home at San Jose, Calif.

Cady is larger, scaling 215 pounds and standing 6 feet 1 inch. Prior to his Army duty he spent one year at the University of Maryland and was scheduled to return there, but changed his mind to cast his lot in pro football. Cady's home is in Washington, D. C.

Richmond, Va.—The State women's golf championship will be played at the Ingleside Country Club in Staunton during the week of September 23, Fred J. D. Mackay, secretary of the Virginia State Golf Association, said today.

This will be the first Virginia women's championship since 1942, when Mrs. Lily Harper Martin of Portsmouth retained her title at the Hermitage Country Club here.

Mrs. Martin is not expected to defend her title. Only one former champion, Mrs. Clara Priddy of Charlottesville is expected to compete.

7-Year-Old Wins Out by 4 Lengths

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bel Air, Md., Aug. 2.—The price of racing went up today when an across-the-board mutuel of $119.50 to win; $31.90 and $9.80 was hung out after a 7-year-old named Albratross had laughed at a field of sprinters in the Conowingo Purse, the day's feature. Racing in the colors of Mrs. J. McCall Marshall, the 7-year-old gave his scattered backers the thrill of a lifetime by jogging home four lengths in front of Charles E. East's Even Break. In third position came S. M. Folin's Erato.

Albratross fell down trying to run in Mexico and performed with little success in a local steeplechase. With She's Scotch and other star sprinters in today's field, the son of Mate was given little or no chance. However, Jockey Walter Gruber booted the veteran to the wire in time of 1:00 1-5 as most of the assembled 9000 moaned "Where did this bum come from?"

She's Scoch matched strides and then took a slight lead over Albratross early, but the old horse took command and it was all over but the monster pay-off. Even Break, after losing ground early, came gamely to be second. Erato closed willingly to be third.

Jockey Bobby Fitzgerald escaped with cuts and bruises when he was thrown by Riverbank in the eighth race.

J. H. Morris' Gay Venture, a fair flat performer, won over the jumps in the day's steeplechase, turning back Edkar Horn's Bar Ship and E. Ferrante's Hobby's First, among others. Gay Venture was strongly handled by Jockey F. Adams and paid $7.40 while going the about 2 miles in 3:40 3-5. Bar Ship stumbled and almost unseated the rider which cost him a chance at the victory.

The daily double paid a healthy $128.80. Stanley Greene, jr's., Bigz Sneeze won the first race under Jockey Bob Edens' handling while J. Nechamkin's Free Son won the second with George Cusimano booting.

Between races . . . They bet $417,978 here yesterday, just about the figure for Bowie on Thanksgiving Day, 1938 . . . Easy Does It When Exercising in Summer

By Ida Jean Kain

EVERYBODY knows that too much exercise isn't good in hot weather. There's no sense in steaming through a set of calisthenics. After all, it's not the heat, it's the humidity. Exercise generates heat which must be dissipated into the atmosphere. And of course when the air is heavy with moisture it doesn't favor rapid evaporation. So maybe you'd better skip exercise entirely.

Still, you do get out of a swim suit all you put in it . . . I don't want to stand between you and glamour. Well, all right, if you insist, take a bit of stretching. But take it in the cool of the morning . . . before you change your mind.

I can't blame you for wanting to stretch, it's so marvelously streamlining. Just a slight stretch of muscle stimulates contraction. It's termed the stretch reflex. So you get slim by reflex action, which develops normal elasticity. It's elasticity that gives a muscle tone. And it's tone that gives a muscle shape. And it's shape that gives a bathing suit fit . . . all that, just with stretching!

Here's one that is no more effort than yawning. To concentrate the stretch thru the midriff, do a little trick to keep the shoulders relaxed and easy. Place right hand in right arm pit, and arc the left arm up above your head. Now bend gracefully to the right. Keep the shoulders relaxed, but pull through the middle. Feels wonderfully slimming, doesn't it? Now tuck the left hand under your left arm pit, arc right arm overhead and bend to the left. The side-bend increases the stretch and makes it just that much more slimming. It's bad form to let your hip bow out at the side as you bend, that makes a spare tire by collapsing the middle muscles.

There is also a stretch-bend technique for zipping off fat that bunches up in odd places, above the girdle top for example. All it takes is the right twist. Twisting at the waist is fine for slimming the waist, but it doesn't reach that roll twixt waist and wishbone. So, we put the stretch at the exact spot. Arms above your head, hands locked, now, twist smack at the waist, hips squarely to the front, and bend slightly side-back . . . see, the pull is smack through the bulge. Then twist again at the waist, not too far, and stretch off center at the other side. To get the roll in back, do the same, bending forward and to the side. That does it.

The secret of getting twice the slimming from stretching is simply to turn your head firmly from right to left whenever second helpings or hot bread is passed. Someone asked why hot bread is more fattening than cold bread . . . that's easy, you like more hot bread.

India Clamors for Health Aid, Report Nurses Here to Study

PEOPLES of India are clamoring for more and more public health services, according to three alert nurses from that country—Miss Daisy Charles, superintendent of public health nurses of Mysore state; Mrs. Rukumani Ivangar, superintendent of the Nursing School in Tranvancore state, and Mrs. May Jainu-Deen, head of public nurses' training in Ceylon.

In town for a few days, the three visited Olivia Peterson, national director of home nursing for the American Red Cross. They came at the expense of the Rockefeller Foundation to study public health nursing here and in Canada.

Miss Charles, a Protestant, will look after the Mysore State's 6½ million population. "Doctoring seems to be a man's world in America," she observed. "We have more women doctors in our state than you do here."

Mrs. Jainu-Deen, a Catholic, pointed out that female medical students in Ceylon also far outnumber those in the United States. Incidentally, it was the reading of Florence Nightingale's life that attracted her to the nursing profession.

Mrs. Iyangar, only Hindu in the group, says the people of Travancore now realize the need for increased public health facilities. "No longer are the natives afraid of the vaccination needles," she said. "Once you explain the need for vaccinations and medicines they are happy to be treated."

Pointing out that Ceylon has a high percentage of well educated women, Mrs. Jainu-Deen said that there is no difficulty in getting student nurses. "We have no nurse shortage in our state," she emphasized. "Even the midwives are flocking to health centers for instruction.

"Generally, when having children, women in India prefer midwives or women doctors," she continued, "although here your women still seem to hold a preference for men doctors."

India's most prevalent diseases are typhoid, dysentery, cholera, smallpox, malaria, hookworm and malnutrition, all three agreed.

Because of the lack of drugs during the war, malaria greatly increased. Malnutrition, of course, also has skyrocketed as the result of food shortages, Mrs. Iyangar pointed out.

Smart Saratoga's Woman Boss Will Bet on Brilliant Season

By Harry O'Donnell

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 2 (AP). — Convent-bred, merry-voiced Mrs. Anne Murphy Clare expects her diary to become "more interesting" this summer at stylish Saratoga.

It has been "comparatively dull" the past three years, she concedes. Now she again anticipates exciting entries similar to such prewar passages as:

"Today, Whirlaway arrived . . ." Or: "Bimelech is coming to Saratoga . . ."

Irish, Handsome

Mrs. Clare, a handsome Irishwoman, is superintendent of Saratoga's renowned race track, the only woman chief of a major racing plant in the country. She's directing a staff of 71 men getting the expansive layout primped and prettied for its 24-day meeting August 5 to 31, the first since 1942, when war intervened.

"It will be wonderful to have racing again at Saratoga," she says. "It's the nicest place in the world for it."

She has been Saratoga's superintendent since 1940, succeeding her late husband, Tom Clare, who had supervised the track 16 years before his death.

Anne Clare, born in New York City, has been interested in racing "since I was a little girl and my father brought me to Saratoga." She had assisted her husband since their 1927 marriage and took over the entire burden when he died in Florida.

A year ago the mile-and-an-eighth oval was carpeted with clover and a grass-weed blanket almost 3 feet thick. Today it is a rich brown strip, ploughed up, harrowed and rolled out and over.

Lonesome, Too

It consists of 4 inches of crushed loam on a "hardpan" of 5 or 6 inches of clay and loam, Mrs. Clare explains. "Under that is China."

The famous stands—built in the 1870's, assistant superintendent John Galligan says—have been repainted and decorated, the 360-odd parimutuel betting windows readied and the grounds landscaped.

Mrs. Clare lives with her 13-year-old nephew, Michael Murphy, in a white house across tree-lined Union ave. from the track.

It was "somewhat lonesome without the races here," she says, even though she saw the transplanted Saratoga meetings at New York in 1943-44-45. But "it wasn't Saratoga. It didn't seem the same. I'm glad they're coming back."

Already the entries are increasing in her diary, a year-by-year volume in which she has—as her husband did before her—recorded the day's administrative and operating developments "just so we know what happened when."

This afternoon the Vandegrifts will entertain a few young friends at a mint julep party for their guests.

Says She Will, But Friends Don't Believe It

Izetta Jewel Miller Retire? Hardly!

By Genevieve Reynolds

MOST women dream of a glamorous, interesting life. Handsome Mrs. Izetta Jewell Miller—now retiring from 12½ years of Government service—has had it. Chances are her daily living always will be chock full of adventure, for she's full of ideas and zest.

She has chalked up for herself successful careers in the theater, in radio, politics, welfare and government.

Older Washingtonians pleasantly remember Mrs. Miller as Izetta Jewell, the actress. President Wilson is said to have visited the theater often just to see the talented, beautiful Izetta in some role. Her theatrical career from 1900 to 1914 included a broad repertoire in Shakespearean as well as modern plays at the Castle in Boston, the Belasco in San Francisco, the Baker Company in Portland, Oreg., and the old Poli's Theater here.

During these years she also played as leading lady for such well known stars as Otis Skinner and James Hackett.

In September, 1928, Mrs. Miller broadcast the leading role in the "Queen's Lace Handkerchief," the first play ever to be broadcast by television. Station WGY in Schenectady produced the program.

In Politics, Too

During the depression Mrs. Miller volunteered to work in relief organizations. Schnectady's Mayor White appointed her Commissioner of Public Works in 1931 and she held the post until 1933 when she became a $1 a year regional supervisor of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. From 1935 to 1940 she served as regional supervisor of the division, Professional and Service Projects, WPA. After 1940 she became regional supervisor, War Public Services, FWA.

When the League of Nations was struggling for existence, Mrs. Miller believed in it so strongly that she entered politics, becoming a speaker in the 1920 campaigns. In fact, she became so interested in the League's fate that she ran for the United States Senate in West Virginia. That was back in 1922 and she was one of the first women to seek such a place.

Again she lost out in the political arena when she ran for Congress in New York State. Nonetheless, she became nationally known in political circles. She was one of the first women to be invited to speak at a national political convention—and the first, if not the only woman, to second the nomination of a presidental candidate. It happened twice, first at the 1920 San Francisco National Democratic Convention and again at the 1924 Convention in New York. John W. Davis was her candidate.

Widely Traveled

To campaign for the reelection of President Roosevelt, she quit her job. Mrs. Miller and Phoebe Omlie, aviatrix, flew over 9000 miles through 14 States, sometimes making four and five stops and speeches each day.

What with all her careers, versatile Mrs. Miller can still stir up several avocations—traveling, writing and lecturing. She's traveled in Alaska, Hawaii, South America, Europe, Korea, Mongolia, Manchuria, Japan and numerous other spots, including Guernsey and Jersey Islands.

MRS. IZETTA JEWELL MILLER

But Izetta Jewell Miller has always been a woman of many interests. With her mother, Elizabeth Lufkin Denno Kenney, who was an actress, writer and artist, she campaigned for woman's suffrage from 1912 to 1914. She and her mother also went together to the International Suffrage meeting held in Rome, Italy, in 1922.

More? Well, Izetta attended the first farm woman's camp at Jackson Mills, W. Va., in 1920, and worked with Dean Nat T. Frame on the well-known "Community Self-Scoring" sessions. As a member of the West Virginia State Committee Cooperative Wool Association, she was active in promoting improved wool raising in that State.

In the club world you'll find her in the DAR, Mayflower Descendants, National Conference of Social Work, Business and Professional Women's Club and an honorary member of Pilot International. Besides, she held the 1921 presidency of the Preston County (W. Va.) Farm Bureau and was a member of the first women's committee of the American Farm Bureau Federation. She's still an active member of the Woman's National Democratic Club here.

Hobbies, Family, Too

Don't faint—she also manages to find time for hobbies—riding, swimming, golf. Furthermore, she helped create the Walsh Club for warworkers and now is president of the board of trustees of Maret School.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman and H. L. Mencken all have written about Izetta Jewell Miller. The Shaw gardens even named a blue lily Izetta Jewell in her honor.

An interesting career and fame have all been hers. Yet she's managed to tuck in two marriages and a family. Her first marriage was to Representative William Gay Brown, jr., of West Virginia, a lawyer and banker. Following his death two years later she walked down the aisle with Hugh Miller of Roselle, N. J., dean of engineering, George Washington University, and a lieutenant colonel, Reserve Corps, USA.

One daughter, Izetta Jewell Smith, wife of Rex Smith of magazine fame, is following in her mother's theatrical footsteps.

There's one thing sure—no woman with such an interesting past can ever really retire. What next Mrs. Miller—BRING LINE ? ? ? can ever really retire. What next? Mrs. Miller smiles—"Retirement, in California," she says.

Commander Lombaer Marries Miss Mildred Frances Mohun

MISS Mildred Frnaces Mohun and Comdr. Forest R. Lombaer, USNR, were married yesterday in All Saints' Church, Chevy Chase Circle, with the Rev. Charles W. Lowry officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Lombaer, Rockville Centre, N. Y.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white net designed with satin appliqued flowers on yoke and skirt. Her fingertip veil was held with clusters of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of roses and stephanotis.

Maid of honor was Miss Patricia Talbot, Grosse Point, Mich., attired in white marquisette with blue delphinium. Bridesmaids were Miss Sarah Jane Richards, Waldo, Wis., and Miss Marian Potter, Grosse Point, also wearing white costumes and carrying white daisy bouquets. Thomas M. Macioce, New York, served as best man. Ushering were Dr. Norman C. Armitage, William S. Boteler, Lieut. Comdr. Hugh B. Vickery and Daniel C. Hamilton.

A reception followed at Chevy Chase and the couple left later for a stay in the Adirondacks. The bride is a graduate of Mary Baldwin College. Commander Lombaer received hise degree at Columbia University.

Visiting in Maryland

Mrs. Bernard Rand of Cleveland, Ohio, with her two young daughters, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sherby, at their country home in Beallsville, Md.

Andrews—Capps

Miss Catherine Capps, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Wayne Capps, Alabama, and Maj. Allen Andrews, son of Mrs. Frank Andrews, Miami Beach, Fla., and the late Gen. Frank Andrews, Army Air Forces, were married yesterday in the chapel at Bolling Field. The ceremony, at 5 p. m., was followed by a reception at the Officers' Club. Chaplain Pardee officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a draped costume suit of aqua made with a bustle. Her hat of maching shade was fashioned of ribbon loops. She carried a prayer book covered with gardenias. Mrs. Martin Peterson, wife of Colonel Peterson, sister of the bride, only attendant, wore beige crepe with a coronet of pale pink blossoms in her hair. Col. Walter Gardner served as best man. Ushers were Colonel Peterson, brother-in-law of the bridegroom; Col. Frank Royal, Col. H. B. Williams, jr., and Capt. Henry T. Allen 3d.

Mrs. Andrews, mother of the bridegroom, who spent the last month in the Adirondacks, was here for the ceremony.

After a brief honeymoon, Major and Mrs. Andrews will be at home at 724 South Lee st., Alexandria, Va. Among guests at the wedding and reception were Gen. and Mrs. Carl Spaatz, Gen. and Mrs. Ira Eaker and General and Mrs. Stratemyer.

In Atlantic City

Mrs. Herbert Guggenheim and her granddaughter, Miss Marjorie Mandle of Wardman Park Hotel, are spending the month of August at the Shelburne Hotel, Atlantic City.

"Well . . . guess I don't get paid for minding little Horace again!"

Town Talk

By Eva Hinton

WHEN the summer camp season is well begun, one can almost hear a collective sigh of relief from the mothers who have sewed on the last name tapes and the fathers who have put the last wiggling small fr or the more dignified teen-agers on the train.

One mother recently received a blow by blow account of her 11-year-old son's journey to camp. He went alone on the morning train to Boston, full of instructions about ordering a lunch on the dining-car that wouldn't make him train-sick. In Boston he was met by a friend of his mother, who put him up for the night and handed him over to camp authorities next morning on the train for New Hampshire.

His hostess wrote the lad's mother that his manners had been perfect, even courtly. Watching him enjoy the dinner which she had planned especially for him, she ventured to inquire whether he liked her choice of menu. He replied that he liked it very much indeed—in fact, he had ordered exactly the same things on the train for lunch.

He went to bed early without urging and when she said good night she thought he looked a bit lonely so she asked "Would you like me to kiss you good night?" "No thank you!" said the lad promptly and firmly.

Next morning at the train he thanked her cordially for his visit, "for the magnificent dinner, and for NOT kissing me good-night."

IT SEEMS that among the teenage girl campers the great worry is "prestige." One must have as much as one's best friend and more than one's dearest enemy. And prestige is greatly enchanced by the receipt of lots of letters at mail call.

"Oh, please, please write to me," begged a sub-deb who was leaving for camp next day. And then, doubtful of promises, "Well if no one writes to me it won't matter so much, because I've written a lot of letters to myself addressed to camp and the cook is going to mail them one by one!"

TAKING off by air from Baltimore for Bermuda this week, Mrs. James Pomeroy Hendrick shepherded six teen-agers for a vacation house party. Mrs. Hendrick has taken a house on the flowery island and the three junior Hendricks and their friends will disport themselves for a month in blue waters and sun themselves on the coral sands.

Also vacationing in Bermuda is Mrs. Sutherland Mayo. Walter Cumming, formerly of the State Department, and his attractive bride have returned to Chicago after a Bermuda honeymoon. The Cummings will make their home in the Windy City to the regret of Washington friends.

EDWARD R. FINKENSTAEDT has returned from "a perfect vacation," attending the Berkshire Music Festival at Lenox, Mass. Golf in the daytime and music in the evening have put him in trim for next season's Washington Symphony drive, which always finds him one of the most enthusiastic and successful workers.

Just starting a Berkshire Music Festival vacation are Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Morris, who took a house in Georgetown after their wedding last spring. Mr. Morris' family owns a house at Lenox no further from the scene of the concerts than a violin can fling a cadenza.

WHEN attractive Mrs. S. H. K. Spurgeon, wife of the Australian Naval Attache, meets her husband out on the West Coast, each will be able to say, "I saw the biggest geyser!" Commander Spurgeon is returning from Bikini where he saw what the atom bomb can do and Mrs. Spurgeon will have seen what Yosemite National Park has to offer in the way of natural geysers.

On her motor trip across the continent, Mrs. Spurgeon is accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Jeanette Corbett Wilson. Their itinerary includes St. Louis, Denver, Yosemite and Santa Barbara.

Sawyer—Hoge

Ferns and summer flowers decorated Bethany Baptist Church Thursday for the wedding of Miss Bette Norene Hoge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Everett Hoge, Reno, Nev., and Frank Grant Sawyer, son of Dr. and Mrs. H. W. Sawyer, Fallon, Nev. The Rev. M. P. German performed the double ring ceremony.

Costumed in a blue afternoon dress with a blue flowered hat and corsage of white orchids, the bride was escorted by her father. Miss Elizabeth Heckman acted as maid of honor. Best man was Lewis Denton. A bridal luncheon followed at the 16th st. apartment of Miss Eva Adams.

The bride attended the University of Oregon, and is a member of Chi Omega. Mr. Sawyer, member of Alpha Tau Omega, studied at the University of Nevada.

After a honeymbon in New York, the couple will live in Arlington.

Culver—De Busk

Miss Omah Virginia DeBusk, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Clyde DeBusk, Fairfax, Va., and Ernest L. Culver, San Diego, Calif., were married July 27 at the home of the bride's parents. Miss Earlma Gwaltney was the bride's only attendant. Roy A. Swayze acted as best man. A reception on the lawn followed.

After a wedding trip to Niagara Falls and Cleveland, the couple will be at home in Fairfax.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

PARIS (By Cable).—An important conversation occurred not in the gold-bedecked hall of the Palace of Luxembourg, but in a private dining room when Jimmy Byrnes sat down with British Prime Minister Clement Attlee.

They called in President Truman's special Palestine Commissioner, Henry Grady; and this is what they talked about:

Attlee proposed to Byrnes that England would play ball with the USA on the plan to unify Germany, provided the USA, in turn would play ball with Britain on its plan to partition Palestine.

At first, Byrnes winced at this trade. He told the mild-mannered Prime Minister of England quite frankly that he had direct orders from his boss in the White House against any partition of Palestine. He added, however, that he believed he could convince Mr. Truman of the wisdom of the trade. Tentatively, therefore, Byrnes accepted the Palestine-Germany swap, subject to White House approval.

But he also asked Attlee to name a definite date for moving the Jews out of Europe. Attlee promised action by September and then proceeded to put the heat on Byrnes for an early White House okay on the entire deal.

This puts Truman very much on a spot, since Jewish leaders in the United States vigorously oppose the division of Palestine into separate Jewish and Arab states. On the other hand, Truman doesn't like to repudiate his Secretary of State. So he's between the devil and the deep blue sea.

NOTE—It is believed that Attlee came from London not so much because of Bevin's alleged illness, but to put over this Palestine-German deal. He considers it extremely important.

Official 'Leak' Policy

SHORTLY after Jimmie Byrnes became Secretary of State he got Washington newsmen riproaring mad by canceling the daily press conferences which which Secretaries of State had held ever since the days of Charles Evans Hughes and by further refusing to answer questions on such rare occasions as he did see the press.

Almost a year has passed since then—a year in which Jimmy Byrnes has learned a lot. Among other things he has learned that a well-informed public is his best ally when it comes to writing the peace and that he can't get a well-informed public without a well-informed press.

Jimmy came around to this point of view several weeks ago when he established an official "leak" policy. Having discovered that the Russians were "leaking" to the press, the Honorable Mr. Byrnes decided to outleak the Russians. To this end, his aides started holding amazingly frank press conference. Almost nothing was held back. A play-by-play account of all secret sessions was given to newsmen.

Naturally, the Russians heard about this but Mr. Byrnes didn't seem to care much if they did. He was convinced his treaty policy was right and he wasn't afraid to have the world know about it.

The climax came this week when the United States Secretary of State made the unprecedented move of proposing that all meetings of the vital rules committee at the conference here be open to the press. Before the delegates could recover from their astonishment, they were knocked for another loop when M. Molotoff supported Byrnes' motion. The Russian Foreign Minister opined that, since the press had garbled Russia's position on the treaties, it was much better to have the press attend the hitherto secret committee meetings.

This was Woodrow Wilson's goal of open covenants openly arrived at. Deserted by its own author at Paris in 1919 the goal was finally achieved by James F. Byrnes at another Peace Conference in the same city 27 years later.

Intercepted Cable

FROM THE intercepted cable department: Senator Burt Wheeler seems to blame his defeat in the Montana primaries partly to the fact that he was used by the Nazis as a political tool against FDR in 1944. On July 15, one day before the Montana primary, Wheeler sent the following cable to Justice Robert Jackson in Nuremburg, Germany:

"Drew Pearson's broadcast yesterday refers to reports based on Goering testimony, charging a plot in which W. R. Davis allegedly told Goering that Senator Wheeler was another who could be counted on to help defeat Roosevelt and that I used propaganda prepared in Germany in my speeches. Earnestly appreciate an answer immediately to Butte whether any of these allegations are known to you or are a matter of record. (Signed) Burton K. Wheeler."

Justice Jackson, busy with his war crimes prosecution, waited two days and then replied inconclusively. The real fact is that the Justice Department has a large dossier of evidence on various Americans who were used by the Nazis, including not only Wheeler but John L. Lewis.

Though Wheeler is given the benefit of the doubt and probably didn't know he was being made a Nazi tool, his intervention on behalf of Nazi agent George Sylvester Viereck certainly puts him in a class by himself. When this columnist exposed the relations between Viereck and Senator Lundeen of Minnesota, Wheeler attacked this writer on the Senate floor. It now develops that Viereck was paid $300,000 by Hitler to influence Senators.

Conference Voting Line-up

HERE is the first secret vote of the Peace Conference for and against Russia. You can make a note of this line-up and be fairly sure it will remain exactly the same all during the Paris session, with one exception—Norway. The pro-Soviet countries as shown by the way they voted on the chairmanship of the Rules Committee are White Russia, the Ukraine, Poland, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Norway and the Soviet Union. They will go down the line for Russia on all balloting. The following group voted against Russia and can be counted on to follow that line regularly: Great Britain, China, Australia, Canada, New Zealand, Ethiopia, Greece, Brazil, France, India, the Netherlands, South Africa and the U. S. A.

Belgium, usually anti-Russian, abstained from voting because its man, Paul-Henri Spaak, was up for chairman.

When you see this 13 to 7 line-up you can understand why Russia wants a two-thirds rule instead of majority rule.

NOTE—The big surprise of recent conferences has been Norway's support of Russia. In the New York United Nations meetings, Secretary General Trygve Lie frequently leaned toward the Russians, especially in the Iran dispute. Reason is that Norway, lying close to Russia, is worried over possible invasion.

Mitchell—Otto

St. John's Episcopal Church was the scene July 27 of the wedding of Miss Barbara Otto, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harwood Otto, Arlington, and William Fraser Mitchell, son of Dr. and Mrs. William W. Mitchell, Miami Beach, Fla.

Gowned in white mousseline de soie with a French tulle finger-tip veil, the bride carried white roses, gladioli and stephanotis. Escorted by her father, she was attended by Mrs. Arvid A. Pamp, matron of honor. Her briesmaids were Mrs. T. J. O'Neill, Miss Virginia Zimendorf, Miss Charlotte Brown and Miss Harriet Linder. Best man was James Meyer. Ushers included Lieut. Comdr. T. J. O'Neill, Ensign C. Bruce Smith, Stanley Hoffmier and James Lout. A reception was held at the Army-Navy Club.

A member of Kappa Alpha Theta, the bride attended Purdue University. The bride studied at Stetson University and belonged to Sigma Nu. He returned to the United States in April after spending a year and a half in ETO with the Seventh Army.

After a wedding trip to Charlevoix, Mich., Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell will make their home in Miami.

Izac Family Backs To Go West Soon

Mrs. Ed Izac has returned to Washington with her four children, Charles, Suzanne, Forrest and Andre, from Ocean City, Md., where they spent 10 days.

Representative Izac, who has been at Bikini to witness A-bomb tests, will be here soon and then the family will motor to their home in San Diego, Calif., where they will stay until after election. Mrs. Izac expects to do some campaigning for her husband.

B. M. Eshleman Will Manage Branch Bank

By S. Oliver Goodman

Bernard M. Eshelman will manage the new branch office of the National Capital Bank which will open Monday at 2337 Pennsylvania ave. se., President George A. Didden, jr., announced yesterday. Gerald E. Burns will be the assistant manager.

Mr. Eshleman
(In RCAF Garb)

Mr. Eshleman, a native of Washington, started his career in 1933 with the Lincoln National Bank. He joined the Royal Canadian Air Forces in 1941, served overseas and was transferred to the American Air Force in 1943. While flying on a mission over France on March 3, 1944, he was shot down and imprisoned by the Germans for the next 14 months. He was liberated by the Russian army in May, 1945.

Mr. Burns, the new branch assistant manager, also is a native of Washington . . . He launched his career in 1939 with Liberty National, changed to National Capital and served with the Navy from 1944 until early 1946.

This is the first branch office of National Capital Bank, whose head office is at 316 Pennsylvania ave. se. The rapidly growing southeast bank, which several years ago absorbed the East Washington Savings Bank, now has resources in excess of $11,500,000 and deposits of $10,708,157. The new office will be called Highlands Branch and will be housed in a remodeled one-story building.

Another branch bank was opened last month by the Bank of Commerce & Savings at 6424 Georgia ave. nw., and two other banks plan to open b ranches.

Anacostia National Bank recently announced plans to open a branch in the Congress Heights section, exact location not yet determined.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 2 (AP).—Opposing trends developed in the grain market today when corn weakened on receipt of moisture in sections of the Midwest and oats firmed on demand for the cash grain by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Selling of corn was encouraged further by a lower trend in live hogs and a substantial break in yellow grain futures at Buenos Aires. Corn in the South American market was down 5½ cents a bushel at midday on top of a drop of 8½ to 8¾ cents yesterday.

Corn in the local market closed 1¾-2¾ cents lower, January 1.40¾@1.40⅞, and oats were ⅛-1⅜ higher, August 74⅛@74⅝. There was no trade in barley. At Minneapolis wheat closed unchanged to 4 cents lower, September 1.91⅜.
